Proposition In Education.
A teacher in a Tucker county public school received the following letter the other day:
"Mr.—Will you in the future give my son easier sums to do at night? This is what he brought home two or three times back: If two gallons of beer will fill thirty-to pint bottles, how many pints and half bottles will nine gallons of beer fill? Well, we tried and could make nothing of it at all, and my boy cried and whined and said he didn't dare to go back in the morning without doing it. So I had to go and buy a nine gallon keg of beer, which I could fill and do, and then we went and borrowed a lot of wine and brandy bottles. We filled them, and my boy put down the number for an answer. I don't know whether it is right or not, as we split some while doing it.
P. S.—Please let the sums be in water.

Grace Darling.
On the morning of Sept. 6, 1838, a young woman in the Longstone light-house, between England and Scotland, was awakened by shrieks of agony rising above the roar of wind and wave. A storm of unaccounted fury was raging, and her parents could not hear the cries, but a telescope showed nine human beings clinging to the windshield of a wrecked vessel whose bow was hanging on the rocks half a mile away.
"We can do nothing," said William Darling, the light keeper. "Ah, yes, we must go to the rescue." "Ah, yes, we daughter, pleading tearfully with both father and mother until the former replied: "Very well, Grace. I will let you persuade me, though it is against my better judgment." Like a feather in a whirlwind the little boat was tossed on the tumultuous sea, and it seemed to Grace that she could feel her brains reel amid the maddening swirl. But, borne on the blast that swept the cruel surge, the shrieks of those shipwrecked sailors seemed to change her weak sinews into cords of steel. Strength hitherto unsuspected came from somewhere, and the heroic girl pulled one up in even time with her father. At length the nine were safely on board. "God bless you, but ye're a bonny English lass," said one poor fellow as he looked wonderingly upon this marvelous girl, who that day had done a deed which added more to England's glory than the exploits of many of her monarchs.

"Senator Haysseed is doing a new electroneering stunt."
"What is it?"
"Going about the country making speeches and giving to each man in the audience a package of seeds warranted every package to raise a mortgage."

TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

The Vines and Shrubs That Give Beauty to Yards.

If the people of any town or village would all take a hand in improvement work, doing what they could in the direction, the result would be surprising in a short time. Almost any one can afford to plant seeds and beautify the home and grounds with flowers. Nothing adds more to the attractiveness of the home than vines, shrubbery and flowering plants properly grouped about the house and lawn. Here are some good points on planting by Dr. J. C. Whitten, horticulturist to the Missouri experiment station:

In beginning spring gardening to ornament the home vines planted about the house and doorway are one of the first and most effective features. Vines lend privacy to the porch, exclude the sunlight and soften the formal lines of the house. Vines may be used as screens to cover up back fences or to hide outbuildings or other unsightly objects. The best way to succeed in the planting of vines is to have the soil well spaded up as early in the spring as it can be worked without being too sticky. This is necessary in order to get a good cover or screen for the porch or outbuilding.

The spaded area need not be over eighteen inches wide, just enough to kill the grass roots back from the roots of the vines and prevent their mingling.
One of the most common mistakes is to set the roots too deep in the soil. The soil warms slowly, and the roots are liable to injury if planted too deep. An examination of the stem of each plant will show the planter how deep the vine stood naturally in the soil, and it should be planted accordingly.

Perennial vines should be trained on galvanized wires that will not rust quickly. Horizontal vines about a foot apart may be attached to the wood-work of the house or other building that it is desired to screen.
If it is desired to train the vines laterally above, so as to close in, for example, the opening in a porch, wires may be placed about a foot apart at the desired height. Too often woven wire screens of not more than two inch mesh are used. These are not satisfactory, as the vines twist around the wires so closely that subsequent pruning is impossible. For the annual vines either wires or strong cord may be used.

Among the best ornamental shrubs for home planting are the golden bell or forsythia, Japanese quince, lilac, bush honeysuckle, neck orange, snowball, barberry, various species of spiraea, weigela, althea and hardy hydrangea. These blossom in the order named. By selecting the entire list one can obtain flowers on at least some of the species from earliest spring till the frost in autumn.

The Golden Egg.
A Maine man claims that twenty-five hens will pay $31 a year besides their board if you buy everything they eat. At present prices eggs certainly look like a bonanza.

The Praise of Liberty

By JAMES ARTHUR EDGERTON

(Copyright, 1906, by J. A. Edgerton.)

WE call with tumult of acclaim
On Liberty's enchanted name.
With flowers of fire and wreaths of flame
We strew her radiant way.
Our upron fills the earth and sky
As bomb and cannon we employ
In sheer abandonment of joy
To celebrate her day.

AND yet when glare and clamor pall
When ends the merry carnival,
When her tricolors cease to fall
As star showers fall by night,
Why then desert her? Why forget
The paths in which her feet are set?
Why cease to march where beckons yet
Her high and holy light?

WE are her children. All we hold
She gave us when the files were rolled
In war's red vapor, as of old
She led the battle's van.
She needs us—not our fiftful praise,
But our support—through all the days,
That we her flag again should raise
And teach the rights of man.

THE song of free humanity—
Who yet has heard its harmony?
The gospel of democracy
Who yet has understood?
Who yet has seen the happy light
That all the world shall render bright
When earth has truly reached the height
Of human brotherhood?

THIS deeds that gratitude requires,
Such deeds as glorified our sires,
Right once more their altar fires
For all the world to see.
Lift up the standard, voice the word,
Till all the lands are thrilled and stirred
And thus in very truth is heard
The praise of Liberty.

A MILITARY DOG
By Alice G. Allen

A long with the procession
Hil day I've marched till now
Above drumbeat and cannon roar
You've heard my proud "bow-wow!"

Through master's long speechmaking
I'm most afraid I napped,
But I woke up and wagged my tail
When all the people clapped.

With horns and loud torpedoes,
Firecrackers small and great,
With taffy and with peanuts, too,
I've helped to celebrate.

But now the fourth's "most over-tired"
Its noise and fun and about—I
I don't care much for fireworks—
I'm—just about—tired—out!

The Same, Only a Little Different.
They were newly married, according to the New York Sun, and on a honeymoon trip. They put up at a skyscraper hotel. The bridegroom felt indisposed and the bride said she would slip out and do a little shopping. In due time she returned and tripped blithely up to her room, a little awed by the number of doors that looked all alike. But she was sure of her own and tapped gently on the panel.
"I'm back, honey. Let me in!" she whispered.
No answer.
"Honey, honey. Let me in!" she called again, rapping louder. Still no answer.
"Honey, honey. It's Mabel. Let me in."
There was silence for several seconds. Then a man's voice, cold and full of dignity, came from the other side of the door:
"Madam, this is not a beehive. It's a bathroom."
