Daughter of F. E. Harlow Passes Away

Nearly every person in Troutdale felt a personal loss at the death of Lucile Harlow last Saturday evening. Her sweet, attractive personality endeared her to all who came in contact with her.

Death came after an illness of ten days with typhoid fever. Everything possible was done to save her life, but being a naturally frail child, the fever smote her down as the wind does a frail flower.

F. E. Harlow and wife, parents of Lucile, are broken hearted at the loss of their youngest child.

A special car conveyed the remains and friends to the Portland crematorium Monday afternoon, where funeral services were conducted, and the remains cremated.

Didn't Like the Write-up

The manager of the Corbett ball team writes that The Herald mentions a recent game between Corbett and Springdale in which it was said that Corbett was victorious because Springdale's shortstop was absent. He says two of Corbett's fielders as well as their shortstop were absent as well. The Springdale grounds were very rough, resulting in the large score of 18 to 11. He also thinks Corbett made several good plays, while their opponents failed where good opportunity was offered.

Don't fail to give former address as well as new one in asking to have your Herald sent to new postoffice.

SEWING CONTEST FOR GIRLS

Attractive Prizes Are Offered for Best Machine Sewing.

The first prize, a fine drop-head cabinet sewing machine, donated by Jones' Cash store, Portland (and he pays the freight), will be given to the girl doing the best machine work at the time of the exhibition on the grounds on Children's day (Saturday). The work to be judged by the committee and to be the same for each contestant.

The second prize, $5 in cash, is donated by Fleishner & Mayer of Portland, and the third prize, $3 cash, from Ben Selling, Portland, will go to the second and third best respectively.

PRIZE SPEAKING CONTESTS.

A Suggestion Which Has Many Possibilities in It.

[Special Correspondence.]

The grange is a training school for public speakers. Many a man can trace his initial effort along that line to the opportunity for debate, recitation or extemporaneous speaking offered in and by the grange. It may not have developed many orators, but it has given self poise and confidence to many who have found themselves quite at ease in public address.

This being so, should not the grange endeavor to bring out its latent ability and develop the talent for public speaking which it may not know it possesses, and where such talent is already evident should it not be encouraged in every legitimate way? To this end a suggestion.

At the next meeting of the state grange in every state let the executive committee or a special committee be empowered to formulate a plan whereby there shall be a prize speaking contest at the following session of the state body in which the contestants shall be chosen from Pomona granges where on a previous date a like prize speaking contest had been held. The contestants being chosen from subordinate granges in which also such contests had been before held, or, to reverse the order, each subordinate grange that cares to enter the contest should first have a competition among its own members to determine which one should represent the grange at the Pomona public speaking contest.

At some Pomona session, regular or special, these should be a speaking contest for representation at the state grange. It is unlikely that every subordinate grange would have a contestant. At any rate, not more than ten competitors should be allowed at the Pomona contest, nor at the state grange should more than ten speakers be permitted to contest for honors. There might be more than ten Pomona granges to have representatives at the state contest, but if there were the others could be represented the following year. The state grange should offer either a cash prize or a medal or both for the best three speakers. The Pomona grange should pay the expenses of its contestant to the state grange, which will be a sufficient honor for any winner in the Pomona contest.

The prizes should be awarded for originality of thought as well as elocutionary art, and therefore only original essays or orations should be considered, not memorized selections. Subjects might be confined to any of the great public reform questions of the day, not necessarily pertaining to the grange, however. A further step might be taken in having a national grange speaking contest, the winning competitors in each state grange contest being representatives. Here would be an honor, indeed, for the fortunate prize winners, and an elaborate medal should adorn the breast of the first honor man or woman.

This is a crude plan briefly outlined, but the idea is what we are after, and this article may lead to a development of it. The highest good would accrue to the several contestants in the training they would receive in the preparation and presentation of their literary productions. J. W. D.

THE GRANGE WON.

in Union There is Strength Forcibly Illustrated.

The advantage of combination among farmers is well shown by an occurrence in a nearby railroad shipping point of some local importance, says the Rural New Yorker. The station has a considerable passenger traffic, being extensively used by summer residents and visitors, and the railroad authorities have for years shown a disposition to ignore requests from farmers and truckers to furnish better trackage in way of sidings and other conveniences for shipping farm products, of which several hundred carsloads are dispatched each season. A local grange was organized several months ago and is in a very flourishing condition. One of the first things to do appeared to be to secure better shipping facilities, and a committee from the grange, armed with the necessary facts and figures, accordingly waited on the railroad superintendent, stating the conditions and making its request with moderation, but with the necessary emphasis. It represented 8,000 acres of highly productive land, shipping an immense aggregate of produce each year, and capital enough to equip and maintain a steamboat line for water transportation to the New York markets if adequate rail facilities could not be had. The officials were so impressed by the showing that they ordered immediate construction of a new fourteen car siding for the farmers' use during the season and promised day and night watchmen to protect shipments and guard the crates, barrels and other returned empties, the loss of which by thieving had long aggravated the shippers. Individual shippers, no matter how important, might have appealed until doomsday without receiving satisfaction.

Getting New Members.

A sensible way of acquiring new members is one adopted by a Columbia county (N. Y.) grange. Every member present is permitted to present one name or more of persons who they think would make good members. These names are handed into the secretary of the grange. At the following meeting a committee of five chosen by the grange or appointed by the master take the names presented under consideration. They take pains to get all the information possible about the prospective candidates, and when satisfied of their eligibility and desirability the committee reports the names to the grange, and each member present is requested to take the list or such part of it as he may wish and then within the following two weeks see all the parties or write them, asking them to become members of the grange. It will readily be seen that if a person gets an invitation from several sources, as in this manner, he will be very apt to respond.

GRANGE INCORPORATION.

How it is Done in New York State—A Simple Process.

"How does a grange proceed to incorporate under the grange incorporation law?" The process is so simple that many people who were expecting a long process of legal technicalities are surprised at the ease with which a grange can become incorporated. To become incorporated the grange should first send a written notice to every member who is in good standing that at the next regular meeting the question of becoming incorporated will be voted upon. If a majority of the members present at the regular meeting vote affirmatively on the proposition, then those members voting in the affirmative should sign the incorporation blanks in duplicate—that is, two copies should be made and signed exactly alike. These incorporation blanks can be obtained from the master or secretary of the state grange free of cost.

When the members of the grange sign the incorporation papers their acknowledgment should be taken by a notary or justice. Most granges have such an official among their members, but if there is none then a justice from outside should be brought in to take the acknowledgments, for which purpose a recess may be taken. After members voting in the affirmative have all signed the incorporation papers one copy is to be filed in the town clerk's office and the other one is filed away with the other papers and records of the grange. When the grange has complied with these requirements it is in a position to hold property, both real and personal, to buy, sell and lease its property, to sue and be sued in court.
