A FEW MINUTES WITH THE EDITOR

The man who does most for others—and the least for himself—is the modest little quill pusher usually found behind the local weekly.

While all the grangers of the county of Multnomah have done nobly, Evening Star has certainly not fallen behind.

Of course some mistakes have occurred in the work of getting the big fair on its feet.

At the last meeting of the Oregon Press association, it was decided to hold the next meeting in January at Portland.

Think of the showing made from one farm—milk, cream, butter, cheese, poultry, eggs, honey, chestnuts, walnuts, alfalfa, corn, oats, timothy, rye, clover, wheat, potatoes, celery, every kind of vegetable and fruit known to northern climate.

Those who are so set upon changing the names of Bullrun and Portland may do worse than read and abide by the sentiment contained in the twenty-fifth verse of the twenty-second chapter of Proverbs.

"I told you so." "It was bound to be a success, exceeded my fondest expectations," etc. etc., is heard on every hand.

A man from Missouri, after a trip through the agricultural building last week, didn't have to be shown.

That was hardly a square deal. County Clerk Fields sneaked up and kissed the bride while the editorial back was turned to see if our better half was watching—and then well, it was time to go.

The grangers of Multnomah county have a right to feel proud of their first attempt at a county fair.

The fair association certainly owes a vote of thanks to the county press and especially to the dailies for their liberal donation of space to the exploiting of our first attempt along exhibition lines.

That was a fine looking couple who stood up before Justice Johnson, and the biggest and best natured crowd that ever gathered at one time in Gresham.

It's a nice thing to get together once in a while over a well prepared meal and discuss things of interest to the community at large.

"Our Awakening." That's what Dr. Short calls the splendid showing recently made by our folks.

"Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out; so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth."

"The rich and poor [should] meet together. The Lord is maker of them all."

No rest for the wicked. The Fair is over, but there is the cleaning up to do.

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

"If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small."

something for shipment. For the small farmer of limited means perhaps the best feature of the matter is the comparatively small cost of the land.

This office is in receipt of a copy of the Daily Beaver State Herald which is being published by Editor Brownhill during the time of the Gresham fair.

Portland, in company with all Multnomah County, has to take its collective hat off to Gresham, where is now in progress the Multnomah County Fair.

A confetti carnival in which everybody took part was the closing feature of the first Multnomah County and Grange Fair.

has been in progress since Wednesday at Gresham more than surpassed the expectations of the management and the attempt this year will be followed in after years with larger shows and with more thorough preparation.

"It is fairly certain that we shall have another fair next year," said J. Johnson, president of the fair committee, last night.

"As far as can be determined at this time the fair has been a financial success and otherwise more successful than we expected.

Old timers who were out through the Powell's Valley region 20, 30 or 40 years ago, but not since, will find it interesting to go out to the fair at Gresham and see what a change has been wrought in these years.

The fair at Gresham is displaying much of the products of the surrounding country, and will, we doubt not, be an eye-opener to some who supposed the people out there were living in the woods yet, as they did a third of a century ago.
