New Buildings for Troutdale

Troutdale is slowly but surely recovering from its misfortune of last summer and shows marked signs of rehabitation. Three good substantial buildings have already been erected and Winehardt will begin the erection of his two-story brick building as soon as the weather will permit, filling in the last but one of the vacancies caused by the big fire of last July. The brick building is to be occupied by Harlow Bros.' store, Larson Bros.' saloon, J. H. Hudson's barber shop on the first floor and the upper floor will probably be used for living rooms. Henry Latourell and Bert Sexton opened up their saloon in the new Fox building last Saturday evening. Work will begin soon on the new O. R. & N. depot. Lumber has arrived for rebuilding the residence on the Oleson farm south of Troutdale, to replace the one destroyed by fire last August.

An addition has been built on the public library building and the library and reading room will be opened in a few days under the direction of the Portland library association.

Korean natives use visiting cards a foot square. They do not give them up, but simply unfold them and show them when necessary.
