RECIPE FOR RHEUMATISM.

Directions to Prepare Simple Yet Remarkable Home Mixture.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice by an eminent authority who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper will be appreciated by those who suffer.

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Bardon, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffer from any urinary trouble, whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture as it is certain to do much good and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

Our home druggists say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

HIS ULTIMATUM.

A Risky Thing to Do, but the Man Was Desperate.

After Crumpet had seen his wife off on the train he returned to his quiet house, closed the door and gazed around at the rows of inviting books, at the table of smoking materials, at the grate fire ready to light, and his eyes glistened with joy.

"Old man," he exclaimed to himself, "what a time you'll have! Wife away at last, and now there will be time to do all those little things you've wanted to do for so long—to read, to loaf, to think and invite one's soul."

At this moment the telephone rang. It was Crumpet's neighbor, Alistar.

"Hello! Crumpet, this you? Say, I've just learned your wife has gone away. Why didn't you let us know? Of course you mustn't stay alone. Come right over and take dinner with us."

Crumpet's heart sank, but he was equal to the emergency.

"Can't come tonight, old chap, thank you. I've got an engagement."

"Well, tomorrow night."

"Sorry, but—"

"The next night."

"Very well—I guess so. I'll let you know."

"We shall surely expect you."

"Thanks."

Crumpet, leaving a sigh of relief that at least he had that evening to himself, once more sank back in his chair.

But not for long. Telephone once more. This time it was Carter.

"This you, Crumpet? Why didn't you tell me your wife was away? Well, never mind. You mustn't be alone. Shall expect you to take dinner with us every night. Come right over—What? Not tonight? Tomorrow? No! Well, make it Thursday. All right. Good! Know how it is myself."

Crumpet wanted to hear no more. He picked up his hat and coat, dashed out of the door and made his way to the nearest stenographer's.

"Here!" he said. "I'll give you a list of addresses. Take this letter and send it to every one at once. I may lose every friend I have in the world," he muttered, "but I can't help it."

The letter he dictated was as follows:

"To Friends and Neighbors—For the first time in years my good wife has gone away on a visit and left me alone. Contrary to all expectations, I am enjoying myself. I've looked forward to being alone for weeks. I love to be alone. I may be peculiar, I may be a crank, but if you have any regard for me don't ask me out to dinner. Don't suggest that at this critical time I leave my home, for I wouldn't do it unless the house burned down. Respectfully, sincerely and firmly, A. Crumpet.—Judge."
