EDITORIAL COMMENT

Recent changes in mail routes at Boring and Orient have caused a little trouble about the delivery of papers. Be patient. Matters will be adjusted in time so all will be satisfactory. If you do not get your paper let us know at once.

It has been very gratifying to have so many of our subscribers renew their subscriptions this week and to enroll a few new ones. Among those who appreciate The Herald let us mention the names of G. B. Middleton, John Freeman, S. B. Johnson, C. A. Wheeler, Mrs. Dan Metzger, G. W. Sager, Mrs. S. J. Jones, Peter Lundine, J. Gist and E. R. Wright.

We suggest the business men of the town inject about 16,000 volts of life into the lifeless body commonly known as the Development League. Just now such an organization could do a lot of good. The one most serious criticism we heard about the fair proceedings of last year was the lack of organization of the citizens for the purpose of entertaining our visitors.

It is doubtful if any of the smaller towns in the state have better evidence of prosperity than Gresham right now. A new $10,000 addition to the school building is nearing completion; five or more residences are being planned and pushed to completion; a large force of workmen are engaged in work on the Fair grounds, and new restaurants and other business places are being opened. We hope we are safe in saying that this is not a temporary spurge but a step to renewed development of the town and the surrounding country.

Providence is smiling again after a brief series of frowns. Early September is a fine season for the farmer who is thrifty enough to take advantage of the opportunities it offers. Now is the time to garner the grain and hay the season has produced. Our climate requires safe housing for both animal and feed. It is a time when the open shed and the leaky roof should be put in shape to give the protection they suggest. This is no time for "Arkansaw philosophy." The winter season will bring its chilling rain and a high percentage of feed value is lost to the farmer who has his feed uncovered and his herds unprotected.

The Herald office this week turned out the first issue of The Pacific Grange Bulletin. Those who have seen its predecessors say it is an improvement over either of them. A peculiarity of the new paper to many Oregon patrons will be the advertising introduced, and the vigorous stand taken by our brothers across the line on political questions. The difference between them and ourselves in these matters is a difference of vigor—forcefulness, if you please. We Oregon grangers have confined ourselves to attacks on principles and new propositions. The Washington Grange is fighting for better principles and better men. They recognize more clearly than we seem to that good principles will not be put in force by bad men. They are going after the "machine men" in no half-hearted way. They believe in politics but not of the partisan brand.

At a time like this, when the public welfare is at stake, it is important that self be forgotten in the desire to promote the general good. The fact that some detail of plans is unsatisfactory to us personally should not justify us in doing a thing or uttering a word, that, going abroad, will prevent the development of plans that ultimately must bring beneficial results.

Now some things have been done right here in Gresham in reference to public matters that might have been done more satisfactorily to ourselves if time had allowed for maturer consideration, but action was necessary. Delay would have meant sure loss of opportunity. In the face of these conditions we must not contend for our personal views, notions or plans, but accept that which will get a final result something similar to that desired.

Now there seems to be some little difference of opinion about the desirability of carrying out some of the plans of the city council. Perhaps they may have made some mistakes but we believe they were made in good faith if there have been any made, and that it will be a much more serious mistake to place any obstacle in the way of carrying out present plans than any other mistake they may have made. Now let us drop our differences, get our shoulders to the wheel and everybody PUSH to make this year's fall fair and festival a complete success. Get enthusiastic. We have a lot for which to be thankful. Have you stopped to think of that? Well, we have. We have a fine farming country around us, good crops, good markets, good roads, good climate, and generally a good healthy, vigorous people. We, all of us, from the Sandy west, held a successful fair here last year. We can do it again, and better. Experience counts.

DAIRY INDUSTRY IN OREGON

OF all the various resources which are at present being developed in our state none is of greater importance than the dairy industry. Because of its stable character, because of its certainty and lack of chance, because of its tendency to enrich rather than impoverish our fundamental source of wealth—the soil, it is easily of first importance to the great class of our people who derive their profit from supplying the world with food. Hard times may greatly reduce the consumption of luxuries, adverse weather may destroy many crops, certain methods of agriculture may deprive the soil of its producing qualities, our timber may in time be exhausted and our mines may be gutted of their store of wealth, but we are fortunate, indeed, very fortunate in having a state which is especially adapted to the pursuit of an industry which is unfailing and which will last as long as the great natural laws themselves.

Nations have developed their resources and settled back to a dependence upon the herd and flock and the patient animals of the field and lot have not failed them. A brief review of the development of the dairy industry in Oregon and a little study of the conditions as they exist today are sufficient to convince anyone that the business is as yet in its infancy.

Not so many years ago our leading agriculturalists and even our educators were shaking their heads at the man who undertook to dairy, saying, "This is not a dairy country." In 1900 the revenue from this industry to the state was estimated at $5,000,000, while last year it reached $17,000,000.

The present revenue from dairying is not small but there are reasons why we expect it to increase and the reasons briefly are these: Conditions are not favorable to the continuance of agriculture as it was formerly conducted here, and dairying is one of the most inviting fields to which the farmer of the old school can turn. Furthermore, dairying up to the present has not been conducted upon an intelligent or scientific basis. Thousands of dollars are being lost annually to the state because the average Oregon dairy cow is not up to the standard she should be. This condition would gradually remedy itself and every effort is being put forth to encourage and hasten the change for the better. Along with the inferior cows, improper care and wasteful methods of feeding are at present potent sources of loss. Waste from the unnecessary feeding of grain stuffs and waste from no feeding at all are common errors. The cost of producing is of as much importance to the dairyman as the price of the product. A few dairymen have solved the problem by the use of home grown crops which they make to succeed one another in such order that the herd has its cheap, succulent green food the year round. Many others are depending entirely upon the native grass pasture in summer and hay alone in winter, but the example of the more successful will become the general rule in the end and the dairy product and the profit from it will be greatly increased when that time comes.

The creamery men through broad and liberal judgment have appropriated for an educational work among the dairymen, in the nature of cow-testing associations, similar to those which have done so much to elevate the standard of the dairy industry in the Old World countries. The object of this association work is to show exactly which cow is the profitable cow and which is not, also which herds are the most profitable herds, and how those herds are fed and managed. This system will make the information possessed by our most successful men common information, providing all are willing to accept it.

After all it is the man who is succeeding that is the great source of encouragement and the great factor in development. Here and there, becoming more and more numerous, are practical dairymen who are making splendid incomes from their business. They prove beyond question the possibilities of the occupation.

With one of the best markets in the world at hand, and with conditions favorable in every respect, and with nothing lacking but a higher intelligence and more scientific methods on the part of these engaged in the business, we may well look for a continued and rapid growth in our dairy industry.—Paul V. Maris, in The Pacific Grange Bulletin.
