EDITORIAL COMMENT

Let us call your attention to the very excellent article contributed by Mrs. Addison to this issue. She has had many opportunities for seeing our country from time to time, and this summer was present and participated in some of the greatest social gatherings of the season. Her experiences are of interest to every reader of the Herald.

We regret to say that some of our correspondence had to be cut down this week. Some of the longer articles came in early and were in type before the locals came in. We are very grateful for the liberal support our correspondents are giving and we mean to give space to everything of a newsy nature they send in, but it will be necessary some times, we fear, to select those items which are of greatest public interest. We have had some criticism offered at different times about news items being trivial and of little interest. That depends on the view point. What is of no importance to me might be of great interest to someone else. In general, an item that merely speaks of a trip to town, is poor reading. But someone might get a benefit even from that. Not long since a reunion of friends and relatives, living entirely unconscious one another's near presence, was brought about by an item in itself unimportant. The sphere of a country newspaper is first to supply the local news. Then later give information about outside affairs. THE HERALD has established a reputation as a newsy sheet, and if our friends continue their loyal support we hope to improve on it as time goes on.

GRANGE NEWS IN BRIEF

Multnomah Pomona Grange met Wednesday, September 16, at Columbia Grange Hall, Corbett Worthy Master J. J. Johnson, Overseer W. H. Snashall, Secy, Mrs. Eaton, Treasurer J. W. Shattuck, Lecturer Mrs. Thorpe, were present.

While the attendance was not as large as at some former meetings, it resulted in a very interesting session. Discussions were given at length on the Grange Fair by H. A. Darnall, H. E. Davis, O. J. Brown, J. J. Johnson and Wm. Craswell. The advisability of conducting the University and Agricultural College under one board of control was pretty well considered and opinion generally was in opposition to the plan. The idea was that it would tend to destroy healthful competition between the schools and might even result in boards that would throw their influence first against one or the other of the institutions and thus keep them intermittently inactive. It would also have a depressing influence upon the students. A motion was finally made to call the attention of the subordinate granges to the proposition, get their opinions and have them published.

The recent good roads convention was discussed at length. The opinion seemed to be generally that the movement was instituted by automobile interests and owners. There was no objection to but favorable support of road improvement in the counties by taxation, state apportionment or by the use of convict labor, but the opinion was that such outlay should be put where it would do the citizens good, in opposition to the proposed building of a trans-state roadway for tourists and their whiz carts.

Brother Johnson brought forth the need of interest on the part of the subordinate granges in the impending suit to defeat the referendum law. He advised a small appropriation from each grange for the purpose of defeating the complainants.

The evening session was given over to initiation of a class of new candidates and a short program, rendered by Mrs. Clara Smith, Mae Rasmussen and Miss Florence Gould, and piano solos by Mrs. O. J. Brown and Miss Stella Anderson. A short dance followed the closing of the grange work.

We must not close without mentioning the very artistic manner in which the hall had been decorated with fern, evergreen and autumn colors, or the very excellent dinners that were so much appreciated by every visitor present. The Columbia people retain their reputation of being the best of hosts.

To Rockwood must be given the honor of having the largest representation and the Rockwood invitation to Pomona for the December meeting was accepted.

Lents Grange had its regular meeting on Saturday, Sept. 12. In the absence of both the Worthy Master and the Overseer, the Lecturer, Mr. Hershner, opened the Grange and Brother Young was asked to act as Master and Mrs. Darnell Overseer. The third and fourth degrees were given to Sisters Spring and Butterfield.

The hall committee made quite an encouraging report. $1800 worth of stock had been subscribed and a competent foreman employed, who has agreed to take half of his work in stock. The board of directors, who have charge of the management of the hall, decided that 5 per cent discount would be paid upon the stock. Excavations have been made for the foundation and work is sure to continue till it is completed.

Gresham Grange held the regular all-day session Saturday. Two members were initiated in the first and second degrees and two were reinstated. During the Lecturer's hour the contest work was discussed and a program planned for the next meeting.

Arrangements were also made for a rest room at the fair grounds. The Grange will meet Saturday evening, September 19, at 7:30 o'clock to plan a program of entertainment for the fair. The next regular meeting of Gresham Grange will be at 10:30 o'clock the first Saturday in October, to prevent conflicting with the fair.

Flash-Lights from a Traveler's Itinerary.

The rain descended and the floods came, but did not prevent the Canadian railroad line via Spokane and the Soo line, landing us in Chicago safe and sound, only a little off of schedule time. We had the unique experience of waiting at one point for the track to be laid over the washed-out district, water at the right of us, water at the left of us, water everywhere.

Seeing Ourselves As Others See Us

As many passengers were en route to their homes from a visit to our rose festival, it was but natural that the leading theme of conversation was Portland, and it is not easy to resist the inclination to jot down a little of what we heard. A promoter from an adjoining state expressed his firm conviction that Portland was commercially solid and the best of financial conditions, and he said furthermore that the people of Portland all looked happy and contented as though they were glad they were living and as though they were looking forward with pleasant anticipation to coming days, and that the people of — had a worried look as though they feared what was coming next. The universal opinion seemed to be that Portland was not only a beautiful and hospitable city but was the great center of commercial prosperity.

Saratoga Springs, the Great Convention City.

Our first objective point was the Centennial Temperance congress held in the far-famed health resort, Saratoga Springs, June 14th to 22. This is a lovely spot from a scenic standpoint, and from a patriotic view point there are many interesting localities in and out of this part of New York.

It is at North Elba in the Adirondacks that "John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave." Largely through the efforts of Kate Field, the farm once John Brown's home when about to be sold under foreclosure, was redeemed and in 1906 was transferred to the state of New York.

Bret Harte first saw the light of day in Albany. Many of the scenes in the novels written by James Fenimore Cooper were laid in the vicinity of Lake George and Glens Falls. It was at Saranac Lake that Robert Louis Stevenson made a brave fight for his life, fighting the dread disease, consumption. It was in Albany that General Phil Sheridan was born—some dispute this but his mother says it was, and she surely ought to know.

As one recalls the history of this state and recounts the tragic and terrible battles of revolutionary times, one can hardly believe such scenes have transpired here in this garden spot with the beauties of Lake George and Saratoga Lake and the marvelously beautiful drives in every direction. Long to be remembered will be the drive to Mt. McGregor where such a wonderful sweep of country lies stretched out before us, but most of all is this spot of historic interest to every true American, for here is the cottage where General U. S. Grant passed from earth land to life land. The spot will ever be a sacred one to all patriots.

The village of Saratoga, numbering, as I am told, some one thousand people in the winter and fifteen thousand in the summer, is famed for its mineral springs. One singular fact is that the various springs are so varied in chemical composition. Springs within a stone's throw of each other are totally different in chemical properties. This village has been a popular health resort way back to the time of the Red Man for here they brought their warriors to renew their youth with the health-giving waters. Late years it has become a great horse-racing center and is now much stirred by the recent anti-race track gambling crusade. Public opinion in some circles has waxed furious because of the governor's work in getting the anti-race track gambling bill passed. For two years the battle has been on and it has culminated in the passage of a bill prohibiting such gambling, and the governor has signed the bill.

The Great Meeting

The temperance centennial congress has been of peculiar interest, having for its main object the commemoration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the first temperance society ever organized. It is an interesting fact to note that the originator of this first temperance society was a medical man, Dr. Billy Clark, and that he was prompted to organize it because of the terrible evils he came personally in contact with through his professional duties. Never has there been a gathering of deeper import than this congress. Men and women gathered from all over our country and many from other countries, representing the highest and noblest and best interest of humanity. As the various section recounted the many victories for good government, the manifest reform wave sweeping the land, all with one accord lifted their voices unitedly in singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The welcome address by the secretary of state was an inspiring one. Hon. Oliver Stewart of Illinois delivered a brilliant response, then followed addresses from the delegates appointed by the several governors of the states. Oregon was officially represented by ye scribe who in the few moments given her, told of the progress and up-to-date-ness of our splendid state.

The Independent Order of Good Templars held a reception banquet which was not only a delightfully social event, but live wires vibrated and electric sparks lighted up the occasion. Distinguished foreigners were here from England and Scotland, India and other countries. The Sons of Temperance held their annual convention here and among other matters of business, they declared against dancing in the lodge room. The Reform Bureau with the enthusiast, Rev. Wilbur Crafts, at the head held many enthusiastic meetings.

The Anti-Saloon league was out with a large delegation and the Civic League of Maine had a fine exhibit, showing the prosperity and achievements of that prohibition state. The exhibit by the American Society for the study of inebriety, alcoholism, the drug euphoria was one of the most extensive one ever before exhibited and this branch was represented by such men as Dr. T. D. Crothers, editor of the Journal of Inebriety, Henry O. Marcy, Dr. John D. Quackenbush, Ex-professor of Psychology in Columbia college, Dr. J. H. Kellogg and many more leading medical men. Every phase of the scientific side of the question was covered and the papers of this section will be a valuable addition to the literature of the age.

A Woman's Congress was held each day and live topics were ably handled. The speakers were representative women from England, Scotland, Maine, Illinois, New York, Vermont, Michigan and Rhode Island. Young People's societies were much in evidence, fourteen or more organizations being represented. An oratorical contest of the highest order filled the evening.

After spending ten remarkably delightful days, our next point was Boston at the "Hub," around which revolves so many pleasant memories of days gone by. It was a wonderful meeting I attended there—the ninth biennial, convention of the General Federation of Woman's clubs. Fourteen hundred delegates were present, a marvelous gathering indeed.

Lack of space forbids my serving up to you the feast of good things spread out each day of the convention. The
