Flash-Lights from a Traveler's Itinerary.

Bostonia orchestra discoursed entrancing music and men and women of culture, refinement and marked intellect delivered addresses that educated, inspired and delighted the vast audiences. Anyone could not attend any of the sessions without feeling that the ideal Mrs. Sarah Decker, the president, had set for her constituency, was being rapidly fulfilled.

Of the many elaborate and important receptions tendered, none perhaps was of more interest than the one at the state capital. The beautiful rotunda of the state house where the reception was held is one of the art gems of our country. Its decorations portray four important events in Massachusetts history and are notable for their fine harmony with the beautiful color scheme of the hall, to which the historic battle flags also contribute.

I cannot begin to tell of the pleasure of once more wandering around old historic Boston, every foot of it teeming with historic interest, and the new, modern Boston with its Copley Square, its unsurpassed public library, its broad avenues, its elevated car line and its subway for rapid transit, its hundreds of trolly rides out to still other historic spots. Neither can I begin to give you any adequate conception of the lovely, delightful parks and resorts full of wonderful charm and beauty; no, one to realize the beauty as well as historic interest of old New England must go and get themselves in touch with the spirit that permeates this historic center.

Of the visits to several renowned watering places, to the home of Daniel Webster, and of a brief stay in Utah visiting the Mormon tabernacle and on and on till the cars pulled in at the Union station, Portland—all that is another chapter.
