EDITORIAL COMMENT

The election is over and, whether it is entirely satisfactory to us personally, it is indeed gratifying to see that the vanquished are adapting themselves to the situation with little complaint. The Republican party and leaders have made statements as to purposes that will not be forgotten. They must live up to their promises or the next election will be far more difficult to win than this was, while the democrats will have additional material for beating down their opposing majority. Only an administration of good faith can retain the continued support of a majority of the thinking people of America.

What the result of the republican victory will be will be an open question for some time to come. Appearances indicate a general revival in business. Whether this is due to the republican victory or to settled political conditions will never be known but it is apparent that business activity will be greatly stimulated by prospective conditions. Already thousands of people are assured of improved labor conditions and reports have it that enormous expenditures in development and improvement work have been planned and that recent disclosures assure us that these plans are now to be carried to completion. Even in our own vicinity there is renewed activity and we look for some very active railroad work before another month. Let us hope the revival in business will not leave our locality cut. In fact, we can help to bring about a revival of business activity ourselves if we only go about it with sufficient enthusiasm.

The Herald announces a new clubbing list this week that will be sure to meet the approval of every reader of good literature. Look it over and send us your orders. You may take any combination you like and have part of the things sent to one address and part to another. This makes an excellent offer for holiday gifts that will be servicable and that will not be forgotten. We wish to call especial attention to the offer on the Farm Journal, San Francisco Examiner, McClure's, Sunset, Delineator, and Cosmopolitan. But then there are others almost as good. Send in your orders early and get a start with the new year.

"Much harsh criticism of the 'corrupt practices' law, passed by the people last June, has been indulged in by organs that are opposed to all reforms in political life, of whatever nature. Some of the provisions of this law may be unreasonably restrictive, and if so these can be eliminated later, but the object and general scope of the law are good, as the result of its observance will be. By election day, voters have made up their minds how they will vote, or can decide without the help of political tilters and hired or interested pleaders. The scenes at the polling places were in very pleasing contrast to those of a few years ago, when the voter was harassed by a line of fellows with tickets and interrupted with appeals to vote thus and so—to say nothing of the practice not so many years ago of buying votes by wholesale for from $2 to $5. The same organs that are complaining so loudly now about the corrupt practices act were also opposed to the Australian ballot system, and ridiculed it in much the same style. They were, and still are, opposed to the initiative and referendum, and to election of senators by the people, and to everything making for cleaner and purer politics. This law probably goes too far in some particulars, but that is no reason for condemning it as a whole, or disapproving its general tenor and purpose."

The above paragraph taken from the Journal expresses the sentiment of all right-thinking citizens. Tuesday election passed so calmly that election features were almost entirely absent. You went to the polls and voted without being prompted, besieged, bulldozed or insulted. We voted as we pleased, when we pleased and without fear of offense or of offending and that is the way it should be.

Complaint was made to us recently that people do not profit by the advertisements placed before them. That we believe is largely true. The man who conducts a newspaper would fare badly indeed if his advertisers failed to appreciate this method of placing their information before the public. The advertiser is doubly a public benefactor. He supports the paper, a necessity, and furnishes essential information to the reading public. We say essential. It is essential. Did you ever try to read a paper in which there were no advertisements? Did you ever realize after it was too late, that a certain advertisement covered your particular want, if you had just given it a moment's notice? One opportunity lost or observed would repay the price of your paper for a year. Within the week we have had one name added to our list solely because of the opportunities our "want ad" column offers. Several others have given subscriptions this summer for the same reason. It takes all these things to make a paper and the reader loses who does not at least glance at the advertising features of a paper. For instance, this week one merchant is offering a special attraction. Find it and get the benefit—its free.

The Herald has never made a practice of mixing advertisements and locals. It is unfair to the reader and is a cheap way of forcing upon them private desires and ambitions. But The Herald believes in legitimate advertising and in patronizing the advertiser. He, more than anyone else, helps to make your town a good trading point—gets the business.

And right here let us add that The Herald is above the average as an advertising medium. We have been assured by a person in close touch with the country newspapers of the state that the number of people who read The Herald is at least double that of those who read the average country newspaper, and we hope to make it better. The Herald is read in one of the most prosperous sections of the state. The people who live here will average with the people anywhere. Their outlook is as bright, their homes as comfortable, and their bank accounts as large. Let us patronize our local merchants at Gresham, Troutdale, Fairview, Sandy, Pleasant Home, Boring. They are essential to our comfort and the growth of the country and we owe it to them to give all the encouragement we can.

Our attention has been called to a new mode of swindling the innocent. Several times in our lives we have known of people being duped of large sums by attorneys who claimed to represent the executors of foreign estates, requiring a small fee for investigating or putting through the claim. Events moved slowly and the victim of the scheme was frequently drawn upon for funds in prosecuting the claim and long before the transaction was brought to a conclusion the supposed heir died or became discouraged by the endless pursuit. Recently another scheme of the same general nature has been discovered. This time certain Spanish gentlemen are searching for a guardian relative of a minor heir whom they wish to send to America until maturity. Of course there is a fortune back of it and a fee of some $950 that must be advanced to cover legal expenses. We hardly think it is necessary to warn our readers further that the scheme is a fraud, yet people are daily contributing their earnings to just such means of enriching themselves.

GRANGE NEWS IN BRIEF

Fairview grange met in regular all-day session Wednesday, November 4, with a good attendance of members and a number of visitors present. The names of Mrs. Margaret Sales and C. Crawford were proposed for membership. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisk and Mr. Bernice were initiated in the first and second degrees. This grange has entered the contest with the intention of winning a prize. We are very proud of the beautiful picture won in the contest last year and also of the fine piano recently purchased by the grange. We hope to start a hall fund as soon as practical. The committee appointed by the Worthy Master to make the final arrangements for a branch library to be established at Fairview, reported favorably. The lecture hour was interesting and instructive. Special mention should be made of the essay on Domestic Economy by Mrs. Maxey, a piano solo by Mrs. Whitney and a fine talk by Rev. Byers on the Fraternal Tie that binds together the members of P. of H.

The next regular meeting of Gresham grange will have an open lecture hour that will be of interest to everyone. Open discussion of all the topics will be invited. "The American Farmer Feeding the World," will be presented by Wm. B. Parsons; "Advantages of Crop Rotation," John Roberts and George Sieret; "Agricultural Education," R. F. Robinson of Portland.

Lents grange will meet the second Saturday of November at Duke's hall. Open lecture hour will be the program. The topics of the state outline will be handled by T. J. Krenner on "The American Farmer Feeding the World"; O. B. Giusness, "Crop Rotation"; "Agricultural Education," Mrs. E. W. Morrill; "Domestic Economy in the Schools," Mrs. A. F. Hersher; Instrumental Music, Floyd Marshall.

Grange Education.

There is no feature of legitimate Grange work that is not advantageous to the members if they will place themselves in position to receive the benefit. The social advantages enable the members who participate in this feature of Grange work—and no one can attend Grange meetings without participating in this feature—to appear to better advantage in such society as intelligent people are frequently called to enter. The financial features enable the members to make such saving in the purchase of supplies as may have been arranged by the local or state authorities, thereby adding to the profits of farming by reducing expenses upon some of the necessities. The spirit of fraternity which pervades all Grange work binds the members together by the strongest of ties and awakens a feeling of regard and brotherly love that has never existed among farmers in the past. These are important results of Grange influence, and entitle the organization to a high position among the agencies contributing to the welfare of the people; but above all these, and leading all these in importance and value, is the great educational work of the Grange, to the promotion of which we shall devote attention during the present quarter. We shall do this not for the purpose of belittling any other feature of Grange work, but for the purpose of increasing the regard for this great feature, which is the coming glory of the organization.

In the early days of agriculture, which were the early days of man's existence, the chief requisite for a successful tiller of the soil was a strong, robust constitution, which enabled the performance of a vast amount of work of the most exhausting type. Even within the recollection of many of us a person was not considered qualified to become a farmer unless he possessed this quality, for it is but recently that muscular has given way to brain farming. This change involves exercise of the mental powers and a constant study of changed conditions and how to successfully meet them. In order to succeed as a farmer there must be careful consideration of all conditions and prompt and vigorous action along the right line. There is no place where these conditions can be studied better than in the Grange, and no action will be more conducive to mental development than this same study and investigation. A study of the condition of agriculture in the different countries of the world reveals the fact that the better the education of the farmers, the greater is their influence in public affairs and the more liberal the home adornment.

One great object in the establishment of agricultural colleges by the United States was to educate and develop the American farmer as to enable him to keep pace with the people engaged in other industries in public affairs, and thereby secure to agriculture such recognition as its importance demands. This involved graduating men into the ranks of the tillers of the soil, and thereby raise the standard of the vocation and of all connected with it. The Grange is doing much along this same line by furnishing the means of study and investigation to thousands of people who would never have any other opportunity for such training, and enabling them to become leaders in state and national affairs. We trust that the discussion of the various phases of this topic will increase the efficiency of the educational work and promote the interests of the organization in various ways.—From Editorial Column in National Grange.
