A GOOD HOUSEHOLD SOAP.

When making soap, to every pound of potash used add one-half pound of borax and a few drops of carbolic acid, according to strength of the acid, stirring in the last two ingredients just at the finish, either in boiled or cold soap, and the resultant soap will be superior to any soap for general purposes, as the housewife is certain of the condition and quality of fat used. If fresh mutton-tallow be used it makes a good healing soap for workmen's use.
