One of the world's greatest natural wonders, the famous Garden of the Gods in Colorado, has been presented by C. B. Perkins, who has been its owner for a quarter of a century, to Colorado Springs to become a part of the city's 3,000-acre park system. It is a notable acquisition and the people of Colorado Springs are to be congratulated in thus securing a feature that has called forth the admiration of tourists from all over the world, who have invariably grown enthusiastic in their praises when beholding the scenic beau-

At the entrance of the Garden of the Gods one begins to see marvelous things -indeed, before entering. The so-called Gateway is an imposing formation, being two great masses of red and white sandstone rocks rising 900 feet with a narrow passageway between. From a distance, the Gateway is not particularly imposing but on nearer approach, it is seen that nature has here performed a miracle. There are most peculiar rocks resembling birds and animals, some of them so closely that the visitor may doubt the evidence of his own eyes and expect the titanic monsters to awaken out of their sleep and spring at him. There are minarets and spires, cones, towers, overhanging fret work, filagree in rocks, beautifully colored veinings and strata, balancing stones, tables, and everything conceivable and some things that are not. Imagination could not run wilder riot than is here seen in reality. The photographs shown with this story give the reader a fairly good idea of some of the formations. Cathedral Spires, one of the most peculiar group of rocks in the entire Garden, is socalled from its resemblance to a church. At near view, the resemblance is lost, but from a distance, at certain angles, one may readily believe, if he did not know to the contrary, that he is looking at a beautiful cathedral and would expect to hear the echoes of the chimes ald

In Farrell vs. Manhattan Market Company, 84 Northeastern Reporter, 481, it appeared that palintiff purchased a chicken at a bargain counter, and on eating a portion of it suffered from ptomaine poisoning. The determining factor of the case was a question of evidence as to whether the dealer was responsible for plaintiff's choice of the fowl or whether she made her choice without reliance on his skill. The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that the burden of proof on this proposition was on plaintiff and that she had falled to sustain it.
