June Wedding An Event.

in full bloom supplied a complete decoration for the lawn. Many beautiful, useful and expensive presents were received, beginning with the kitchen utensils given by Miss Metzger's pupils, silverware, China, furniture and a neat purse given by the groom's father to be applied in housefurnishing.

The bride and groom left by auto for Portland and were intending to start immediately for San Francisco where they will remain for several weeks. A new home is being completed by the bride's cousins, Messrs. Harvey and Jake Metzger, adjoining her former home. It is a neat bungalow with all the modern conveniences where the young people will be at home to their friends about September 1st.

A Home-Run on a Two Base Hit.

(Special Correspondence)

One of the most forcible remarks the writer has heard for some time was that made by State Superintendent Ackerman in his recent address to the graduating class of the Gresham High School. The speaker declared there were "too many people trying to make home-runs on a two base hit." Using the parlance of the national game, he hit the truth square in the eye. There are many young men and women who are going out into the world to win success who are only half prepared to cope with the difficulties they will inevitably encounter. They have neglected to take with them the sinews of war and when too late to make amends they find themselves surrounded by inefficiency to such a degree that they fall before those who have been diligent in preparation. Competition in the successes of life has developed to that degree that the one who wins must meet the full requirements of an exacting public. No two-base hit will carry the runner to his coveted goal. He must strike hard and persistent ere he ventures on the run of life. The man who contents himself with a preparation that is forced upon him by a burdensome struggle for existence will continually feel the hand of oppression which he so often construes to the form of government under which he lives or to those who have not neglected to fully equip for the race. Therefore, for a lack of efficiency we find derelicts stranded along the walks of life with little hope of rising above the mediocre. Efficiency! Efficiency! is the cry that comes from every farm, factory and profession. Give us men who can do the work and do it right is the demand of every employer and that demand is scarcely ever fully supplied. The young man who meets the demand with a strong developed mind and body will have no occasion to complain at the hand of fate. We should not expect to make a home-run on a two base hit.

GRANGE NEWS

The Evening Star Grange met in regular session Saturday, June 5, at 10:30 a. m. There was an attendance of 150 members beside visitors from other Granges. The morning session was devoted to the initiation of candidates three members coming in on cards and six taking the first and second degrees. During the last month the Grange lost one of its members by death, Thomas Lewis.

This meeting was Flora Day with Miss Mary Paquet presiding in the exercises, of which the following program was rendered: Vocal solo, Miss Bessie Yarnell; recitation, Miss Mabel Hill; reading, Mrs. E. A. Niblin; piano solo, Miss Lela Johnson; recitation, Mrs. E. J. Nelson; song by the Grange, "Way-side Blossoms"; recitation, Miss Gladys Willard; piano solo, Miss Ethel Hart; recitation, Miss Nora Holm, Flora of the Juvenile Grange; recitation, Miss Lottie Schulerberg.

Sister H. L. Vail and Brother J. J. Johnson spoke of the lecture work at the State Grange, telling about the lecture work from the different Granges over the state. Brother R. C. Wright spoke about co-operation laws.

Reading, "Joining the Grange," by Mrs. Vail, was very interesting, as were the remarks of visiting Brothers Bryant of Oswego, Lazelle of Warner, and Snashall of Pleasant Valley Granges. Sister Dunning told of her trip through California in an automobile. It was interesting and instructive.

Concrete Stable Floors.

(Kansas Farmer.)

Farmers who have long used concrete floors for stables are generally enthusiastic in their advocacy. It is true that poorly constructed concrete floors are liable to become rough and to be marred with depressions that retain liquids and are hard to clean. Advocates of concrete stable floors are usually liberal users of bedding and are scrupulous about saving the liquid manure. The bedding serves the double purpose of absorbing the liquid manure and protecting the concrete against injury from animals' hoofs. Again, it is entirely practicable to lay broad planks over the concrete if it be thought that a wooden floor is to be preferred. Broad planks, if properly fitted, stay well in place without nailing, or if strips are spiked across the ends so as to make the planking for a stall practically one piece. The concrete floor should cost rather less than a well supported and well constructed plank floor. The ease with which the plank covering of the concrete floor can be removed when worn out together with the durable character of the foundation make for the economy of this plan.

Methods of laying ground floors of concrete are simple. It is necessary that the soil on which the floor is to be laid shall be made very compact. For heavy stock the floor should be not less than four inches thick. If there is danger of settling under any part of the floor the thickness should be increased to five or six inches. The site should be well drained. Where cinders or broken stone are available many builders prefer to place a layer of these before making the floor. In any case the surface on which the floor is to be laid should be made even and should be brought to the exact level or slope proposed for the top of the floor.

When everything is in readiness, if the floor is to be four inches thick, it is customary to enclose a section containing about 36 square feet, at one corner of the space by staking down 2 by 4 scantling placed on edge. This space may be square, or if it is desired to have the space of a stall without seam, such space may be enclosed by the 2 by 4's.

Now mix the concrete. Shovel into place, filling the inclosed space to within one inch of the top of the scantling. A finishing coat consisting of one part cement to one and a half parts clean sand should be placed before the main body of the section has set hard. This finishing coat should be wet enough to work well with a trowel. It should fill the section to the top of the enclosing scantling and should be made very firm. It is well to do most of the work with a wooden or cork float, since a steel trowel is apt to drive the sand from the surface, leaving the cement liable to be seamed with "hair cracks."

It is generally recommended to lay floors in alternate sections, leaving the intervening spaces to be filled after the first have set. If gutters are desired, as in floors of cow stables, these are readily constructed when laying the concrete. Mangers and watering troughs are also constructed making them a part of the single stone which forms the floor. Mangers and other forms above the level of the floor may well be reinforced with steel rods or at least heavy wires to give them strength. Ground plans and sectional drawings of all structures should be prepared before the work begins. It will be found far cheaper to make changes in the pencil marks forming the drawings than in the concrete after it has set or in the wooden or iron forms in which it is to be cast.

For Harvesting Fruit.

The season for harvesting fruit is some months off, but the suggestion here made will keep. The invention will make the gathering of apples, pears and peaches a far easier and quicker proposition than it has been heretofore. This invention is simple enough; but, like many other simple expedients, it remained unthought of until recently. The contrivance used is of metal, made on the principle of a pair of scissors, except that where the point of the scissors would come there is on one side a disk and on the other a circular aperture opening into a long bag, which is attached to it. The handles of the harvester are hollow, so that they will fit over the pointed ends of poles, which may be of any length required. By means of this device a person standing on the ground can reach fruit in otherwise inaccessible places and by compressing the handles can snip the fruit from the limbs into the bag. In this way fruit can be plucked before it falls to the ground and becomes bruised.

Spray For Apple Trees.

One of the most successful apple growers of Ohio uses arsenate of lead in the bordeaux mixture to kill the different fungi, as well as to keep in check the codling moth, spraying at least four times after the bloom falls. His formula for bordeaux is three pounds sulphate of copper, five pounds of lime and fifty gallons of water.
