 It is absurd for right minded, clear headed, practical people to make themselves miserable over what people say, as this is of the least possible importance of anything that enters into our lives. It is a mere accident on the way, having no more bearing upon our lives and destiny than the temperature of the day—whether the sun shines or whether it rains. We have our lives to live, our souls to attune to the infinite destiny that is awaiting them when this little passing span of earthly life is ended. What people say has no more to do with the great problems of a person's life than the direction the wind is blowing; just a sand grain upon the beach of life's incidents. We are powerless to undo the past or mold the future, but we can keep from wronging others and train ourselves to useful labor. Glad that we are responsible human beings, performing each task to the very best of our ability, leaving the great result of it all with the power that placed us here. How can it possibly matter what the striving, pushing, worrying human beings, who are all traveling the same road with us, say about our efforts? If you are one of the many who have made themselves really unhappy, worrying
