When Daddy Was a Boy.
 I suppose nobody never had a gooder dad than pa,
 An' only way he's better than the woman who's our ma
 Is he kin tell more stories 'bout th' winters long ago,
 When Winter wuzent Winter 'thout e-even feet o' snow,
 An' 'thout th'e blame thee-mometer wuz forty-six below.
 An' daddy says it's so,
 An' daddy ort t' know.
 An' he says 'at he's seen th' time when folks 'ud freeze t' death
 If they dis stepped outside o' doors!
 Why, it 'ud freeze their breath
 An' choke their throats afore they'd git a chanst t' thaw ag'in,
 An' wouldn't give 'em time t' git fer-giveness for their sin!
 Why, it wuz dis so cold 'at it would freeze their voice right in!
 An' daddy says he's been
 Where words wuz frozen in!
 An' daddy says 'at folks ain't got no 'musements now, today,
 Like they all had when he wuz young—
 I've often heard him say
 'At his most fun wuz when th' snow wuz dis so dad-blamed deep
 He couldn't go to see our ma—fer daddy used t' o keep
 A-stiddy comp'ny with her then—an' then he'd have t' creep
 Through a snow wall
 T' go at all.
 An' now we don't have spellin' bees, ner huskin', ner debates, ner spats, ner breaking dates,
 Ner nothin' else like they had then—why, pshaw! their bobsled rides
 Wuz forty dollars' worth more fun than old toboggan slides
 An' opery plays an' things like that—an' well, pa says, besides
 High-tonedness hides
 A lot of snides.
 An' then his eyes 'll glisten when he sets in to relate
 A lot of sweetest stories 'bout a dear, old-fashioned grate
 'At he calls fireplace—but us folks don't call it that today—
 An' we don't have no spinnin' wheels ner nothin' thataway.
 An' it dis ain't no wonder that us children allus say
 We'd like t' play
 In dad's old way.
 But when he gits t' talkin', 'bout his old home in th' hills,
 He stops his laughin' an' gits sad, an' his dear eyes dis fills
 With tears as he recalls th' days 'at's now long since gone by
 When, as pa says, he owned th' earth,

Solid Facts.
 Did you know that the Acme Washing Machine sold by R. R. Carlson has never been equalled by the number of good points in its workings by any other machine. These facts are not disputed by anyone. Regrets are frequent from purchasers of other makes, that they had not seen the Acme before buying.
