A Methodist Minister Recommends Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for several years for diarrhoea. I consider it the best remedy I have ever tried for that trouble. I bought a bottle of it a few days ago from our druggist, R. R. Brooks. I shall ever be glad to speak a word in its praise when I have the opportunity."—Rev. J. D. Knapp, pastor M. E. church, Miles Grove, Pa. Sold by Gresham Drug Co.

In many cities in Oregon the obtaining of water for municipal ownership and distribution is being sought and obtained. People will not settle in a town where the water supply is insufficient or high priced. It is considered a sign of mossbackism for a city to allow its water supply to be in the hands of a private company. The better the water and the cheaper the water the better demand for lots, the faster the town grows and the more the town is advertised.—Portland Labor Press.

A Dinner that Walked Away

walk around the table and receive delicate bits from every one.

While her little mistress was studying or sewing Kris would stand and look at her, turning her knowing head first one side and then the other and sometimes saying in a reflective way: "Quit!"

As soon as books and work were put away she was ready for play. In fact, she enjoyed her strange life very much and grew fat under it, so that pretty soon the boys began to tease Margery by suggesting that her pet was ready to take her place on the table.

The only time she seemed to be uncomfortable was when the cheerful kitchen was scrubbed.

No sooner did Hannah appear on the scene with scrubbing brush and go down on her knees to polish the floor than Kris would hop by a sort of ladder which one of the boys had made for her up to a corner of the high mantel over the fireplace, and there she would sit, all humped up and miserable, till the work was done or till her little mistress came and took her into the sitting room.

The place where Kris was intended to spend the time of her banishment from the yard was a large chamber over the woodshed, which was kept warm by the kitchen chimney, and there's where her bed, or roost, was prepared for her and where she was shut up every night. But she was so lonely and unhappy and tried so hard to get out and Margery was so fond of her for a playmate that she generally got down before breakfast and did not go back until bedtime, which is at dusk in the turkey family, you know.

Well, the winter passed away, and spring came. Kris grew a new sort of feathers under her plaid dress, and when the weather became warm mamma said she must leave off her dress and go out of doors with the rest. So the first really warm day Margery took off the red dress and drove her out.

Kris had not forgotten her cool reception in the winter, so she at first was careful not to go too near the turkeys, though they did not object to her now in her feather dress. After a few days she stayed most of the time with them, only coming when called and generally making a visit to the table for her usual treats.

She had not been out very long when one morning Margery went out to see her and she was gone. No one had seen her since breakfast. Margery felt very bad and after looking all about came to the sad conclusion that she had strayed away and got lost, for the whole flock wandered far off to feed. But the next morning at breakfast time Kris walked in, as usual, and began to beg for food. Margery hugged her and fed her, and she ate as though she was starved.

When she had finished her meal she went out again, and about noon her little mistress sought her again, and again she was missing.

This now became the regular thing with Kris. Every morning she was on hand for her breakfast, and in spite of watching she would slip away and hide so that no one could find her again.

Poor Margery was almost heartbroken at this tendency to vagrancy in her pet, but Hannah only smiled and said:

"Wait a bit and you'll see something nice."

But, though Hannah had her suspicions, she was not prepared for what really occurred one day.

After this strange conduct had been going on for a few weeks there came a day when Hannah had another scare. She declared that tramps or thieves were up in the woodshed chamber. She heard them, and she dared not go up.

While she stood in the woodshed telling Margery in a whisper about it the child heard a step that she knew.

Kris hopped down on to the top step of the stairs which led to the room overhead. After a moment she hopped to the next, and after her came, one by one, twelve baby turkeys.

Margery screamed with delight and ran to catch Kris and pet the whole family, while Hannah rushed upstairs in dismay and saw a sight that shocked her more than the fear of tramps.

In that room trunks and things not in use were stored, and a month or more ago Hannah had carried up there a large square "squaw basket" with a cover, a basket such as the Oneida Indians of New York state make for various household uses of their white sisters.

This basket was nearly full of the winter supply of woolen stockings, all neatly mended and laid away till fall. In this basket, on these soft stockings, had Madam Kristine made her nest and hatched out her interesting family.

She must have found the door ajar and managed to pry off the cover, which lay on one side, and here she had hidden all these weeks.

The room was put in order and the door closed, and Kristine was provided with a place in the yard. Every day she wandered off with her babies, but she never started until she had visited the breakfast table with her whole brood to get her regular morning meal.

At first it was funny to see them run around and pick up crumbs, but as they grew it began to be troublesome to have a flock of turkeys so much at home in the house. So mamma made a new law that Kristine and her family must be fed at the door.

After that her life was like that of the other turkeys, only she knew her name and would come when called and never failed to run up to Margery whenever she saw her.

And the dinner that walked away last year supplied twelve tables with dinners this year and provided Margery with a fine lot of pocket money for her pains.

Croup Cured and a Child's Life Saved.

"It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to that of the thousands who have been benefitted by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My child, Andrew, when only three years old was taken with a severe attack of croup, and thanks to the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy his life was saved and today he is a robust and healthy boy," says Mrs. A. Coy, Jr., of San Antonio, Texas. This remedy has been in use many years. Thousands of mothers keep it at hand and it has never been known to fail. For sale by Gresham Drug Co.
