GRESHAM LOCALS

On account of the death of C. R. Thornton, the invitations to the marriage of Violet E. Gould to Perry Thornton are recalled and a quiet wedding will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Leighton at La Grande, Oregon.

John Wood of Columbia View has rented his farm and after his sale, which will be held Dec. 30, he will go to Kansas for his health. Mr. Wood's family is now in Kansas.

Mrs. Bachmeyer is the recipient of a novel and useful present from her eastern friends who formerly associated with her socially. This is a fine bedspread with the names of all those friends worked in red on the white ground. She hasn't taken time to count them, business being too brisk for that just now.

Mr. and Mrs. John Conley will spend the holidays visiting relatives at Cottage Grove and Eugene.

Mr. Oglevie of Montavilla was in this vicinity this week looking up a location. He was the guest of H. L. St. Clair.

The third quarterly meeting of the Free Methodist church will be held, beginning Friday night continuing Saturday night and Sunday morning and evening. Rev. W. J. Johnston, presiding elder, will conduct the meeting.

The M. E. church will have a rousing Christmas entertainment Friday evening. Two or three trees are to be used and Santa Claus is expected to be present. Everybody is invited.

Rev. Albert E. Ayres of Bombay, India, will preach at the M. E. church Sunday morning and evening. The evening lecture will be relative to his life and experiences in India.

The funeral of Bert Wheeler, who was employed in the mill at Troutdale, was held on Tuesday. Rev. Paronagan delivered the address and interment was made in Douglass cemetery.

Fred Fieldhouse, Geo. Sieret and Emil Kardell have found a new name for the hillside that lies west of town. They base the name of this new department on features of a western story they have been reading and so they have dedicated it Wallulu Heights. Now it is up to them to make the name stick.

There will be Christmas services at the Zion's Evangelical church on Saturday at 10:30 a. m. No services on Sunday.

Little Earl Anderson snuffed a coffee bean up his nose yesterday, causing a lot of trouble for himself and family. Folger's Golden Gate Coffee is enjoyed more when used as a beverage.

Inter-High School Debate.

In the assembly hall of the Gresham High School on Friday night, December 17, the Parkplace and Gresham High School met in the first inter-high school debates of the year. The question was one of present-day interest and importance: "Resolved that municipalities should own and operate the lighting plants patronized by the general public. The affirmative was upheld by the Gresham debaters, Eessie Osborne, Maude Michel, and Bert Hoss. The Parkplace debaters were Olga Hanson, Fay French and Leland Hendricks. After a number by the Lucerne Glee Girls, Maude Michel, first speaker on the affirmative, opened the debate. The Gresham team based their argument from a political standpoint and discussed it with regard to the abuses for social reasons, political reasons, financial reasons and the advantages under municipal ownership at home and abroad. The negative as outlined by the leader, Olga Hanson, treated of the inefficiency of the present system due to corruption.

Following the closing speech the judges, Prof. Walker of the Benks-Walker Business College and Principal D. T. Van Tine of Portland and Hon. J. E. Hedges of Oregon City, made their decision, resulting in two votes for the negative and one for the affirmative.

Although somewhat disheartened for a moment, the Gresham rooters, who had been stung in evidence during the evening gave a rousing yell for Parkplace and one equally enthusiastic for Gresham. Some good-hearted rivalry was shown between the two schools in their yells and songs, for the Gresham students under the leadership of Herbert Ryan, did some splendid rooting, as did also those of the Parkplace school.

The Gresham team were good losers, never for a moment showing the disappointment they felt, and although they lost the decision they gained all that debate work offers—a thorough understanding of the question, its logical outline, the working up of material, practice in speaking before the public, together with the mental discipline as a result of the intensive study. Hence, the decision is a minor point and our debaters were gainers in all but this.

Better sell half the stock and give all the feed that remains than to stint the whole herd.

A DEPENDABLE BROODER.
 If not too tight to buy right and you wish to save crying from chicks dying, beware of brooder bargain buying. Hatching chicks is often easy, but brooding chicks is a hard and perfect maturity is not, and the best brooding apparatus is none too good when it concerns the development of life and your success or failure. Therefore when you invest buy the best.

We present the picture of our style brooder that stands about even with

BROODER EXTERIOR
 Biddy in rearing the largest average of finely matured birds for nest and show.

Much different from the dark brooder, with leaky trapdoor roof which lets out the heat and lets in the rain when raised to view thermometer and chicks and often cuts off the head of some venturesome bird that tried to escape. This brooder is well aired and lighted, the thermometer and chicks are in view and to clean you simply remove board under nursery door, open the double door and scrape the level floor.

The lamp box is convenient to attend lamp; the flame is in view; the lamp and box are never overheated, as surplus heat passes through a screen into nursery.

The interior is divided by a movable partition (b) into nursery (1) and sun parlor (10) or scratch floor.

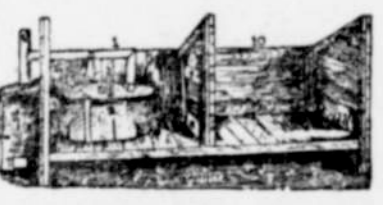

Thus the house has two temperatures, and the one level floor makes it easy to heat and clean, and chicks are not crippled by falling down steps.

The hover (2) and partition (3) can be easily removed to make a first class roost coop.

Heat is applied by a lamp which fits into a hood in the lamp box (7) and passes through pipe (4) into a doughnut shaped radiator in top of hover (2), while smoke passes through pipe (5) to chimney (6), which rests on top of lamp box.

Hence there is no smoke inside, no hot floors to lame chicks, no hot drum under hover to roast them and make them crowd.

The hover (twenty-two inches in diameter, ten inches high), skirted with felt, is all free space underneath, is warmed with top heat as in nature, has plenty of air, and the chicks can crowd into no corners. Ventilator slides (12) control air in the brooder. A slide in top of hover or regulator working a damper adjusts the heat to the needs of the chicks, the air shaft passing through the radiator cooling it and making a circulation.

The hover and parts may be used independently. The brooder is three feet wide, six feet long, three feet front and two feet rear and will accommodate seventy-five chicks for best results.

DON'TS.
 Don't feed rotten vegetables. They cause ptomaine poison and bring indigestion.

Don't wait till your birds are half dead with lice before you dust the crawlers.

Don't think when your birds are scored by a woman judge that sex decides intellects.

Don't use artificial heat in your poultry house nor bother heating the drinking water.

Don't let snow drift in nor make them sleep in cold air currents and eat snow for water.

Don't parade your failures before others nor print your bank account in the newspapers.

Don't keep at the business if it means debt after debt nor if you don't have a good living yet.

Don't expect to get big prices until you advertise and your stock gives you a good name.

Don't follow the judge all around the show. He'll know you're a sucker from the word go.

Don't feed musty grain. It causes the disease called "mold," which brings suffering untold.

Don't forget that high priced shells are often first prize sells. A hot air advertisement often covers a multitude of culls.

In few organizations could so many competitive meetings be held and have them all result in such a kindly feeling afterwards, with usually a complete absence of the bitterness which often accompanies defeat, as in the grange. In one grange recently the ladies won, in a closely-matched contest, and scarcely was the decision announced when the leader on the men's side jumped to the strge and proposed three rousing cheers for the ladies.
