DENTISTRY 2,000 YEARS AGO

Fillings and Settings of Jadette Made by Aztec Dentists.

In the ancient Central American days so long past that no remnant of tradition concerning them lingered when Cortez landed, 300 years ago, there was a good deal of fashion in dentistry, an exchange says. Separately entombed skeletons that have been discovered, probably those of titled people, since no burying grounds have been found, show that filing of teeth into patterns was common among the upper classes.

Almost every set of teeth that has been preserved gives evidence of the dentist's handiwork. The teeth were usually filed along the crown, with two or three levels of filing on a single tooth, giving it the aspect of a short flight of steps.

The fashion in Copan that was most striking was the insertion of jewels in the teeth. Once in a while now, when some actress seeks to be conspicuous, she will have a diamond set in a tooth. In doing this she is merely copying dead and gone Copan notables of a couple of thousand years ago, only they had no diamonds. The first process was the drilling of a neat hole in the face of the tooth, a delicate one when done with a stone tool.

These holes are clean and true and are not countersunk, as is often the case with the stone man's work. Then to fit the hole a bit of jadette was fashioned. Jadette, a brilliant mineral of about the hardness of quartz, seems to have been the most precious gem of these older people. Of it they fashioned the ear plugs that are the progenitors of the modern lady's earrings and brooches and beads for the neck and dress ornaments. Brought to a true fit, the stone was fashioned in its place by a cement so firm and lasting that the gems remain in the teeth to this day.

A MONKEY'S MEMORY.

Jocko was a little monkey which was sent as a present from Demerara to a gentleman living in a town in eastern Pennsylvania. He found a good home with people who gave him privileges that few of his kind in captivity ever know. The playful antics of the little creature were ever a source of amusement to the family, who placed him in a room at the top of the house, and were very fond of him.

When Jocko had been in the family three years, his owners made arrangements to go abroad. Not knowing what to do with the monkey, they concluded to send him to the zoological garden in Philadelphia, where they knew he would be well cared for. The family felt sorry to part with him, but they knew it was all that could be done.

Seven years rolled round before they saw Jocko again; and then the former owner of Jocko, being in Philadelphia with his wife, went to the zoological garden to see him.

When they stood before the cage where the monkey, with a number of others, was confined, they peered in, trying to distinguish their own from among the other little creatures.

One of the monkeys reached his arm between the bars and plucked at the flowers on the woman's hat. "Jocko!" she called. "Is that you, old fellow? Have you forgotten us?"

The monkey seemed to recognize the voice, and made frantic efforts to reach the woman, while his old master went in search of the keeper, to request him to take Jocko out, that they might see what he would do, and if he really recognized his friends.

The man readily assented, and no sooner had the monkey attained his temporary freedom than he sprang upon his former master's shoulder and chattered away in his native tongue. Great tears welled up into his eyes and rolled down his face, which proved that he had not forgotten his friends, and that gratitude, one of the rarest virtues in the breast of mankind, was not wanting in the child of the forest.

Locomotion.

They used to travel in a cart. Behind the faithful ox; It was not what is now called "smart"— But wheels beneath a box, Then in a more progressive age. Ambitious to go fast, Some genius built a Concord stage; The day of carts was past, Another genius thought of steam, He brought it into use; It was the climax of his dream, And cooked the Concord's goose. Nor was this all, the auto next, Was born to burn the miles; The man on foot was sorely vexed, The man on board all smiles. "This is the end," the people said, But chanced to glance on high, To see, across the blue o'erhead, An aviator fly. But still inventors do not tire, Next week, or year, at most, Men, quick as message on a wire, Will flash from coast to coast. —Exchange.

The Best Proof.

Little Ted, 7 years old, was sent to the bathroom for a "good scrub" before dinner, but returned so quickly that his mother declared he couldn't possibly have washed himself. He replied, "Truly I did, mother, and if you don't believe it you can just go to the bathroom and look at the towel." —Deineator.

Constipation

"For over nine years I suffered with chronic constipation and during this time I had to take an injection of warm water once every 24 hours before I could have an action on my bowels. Happily I tried Cascarets, and today I am a well man. During the nine years before I used Cascarets I suffered untold misery with internal piles. Thanks to you, I am free from all that this morning. You can use this in behalf of suffering humanity." R. F. Fisher, Kosonko, Ill.

One Last Chance.

She was shopping. She drifted into the place where they sell blankets. Real after roll was deposited and spread out before her. Still, she listlessly asked for more. Finally, with brazen face, she remarked, as she rose:

"Oh, well; I don't really mean to buy any. I was only looking for a friend."

"Pray wait a moment, ma'am," said the attendant, suavely, "there's no one more blanket on the shelf. Perhaps your friend is in that."—Tit-Bits.

Trees Brought Rain.
In lower Egypt rain fell very seldom. During the French occupation, about 1789, it did not rain for sixteen months, but since Mahomet Ali and Ibrahim Paasha completed their vast plantations—the former alone planted more than 20,000,000 olive, fir, cotton, acacia, plane trees, etc.—there now falls a good deal of rain.
