EDITORIAL COMMENT

WE have been very much interested in several phases of the milk-producing business. First it is being frequently drawn to our attention how very many people are using milk from diseased, or poor or otherwise unsuitable cows.

into the bucket. The milk should be immediately removed to the cooling rooms, strained and sealed from infection.

It is an established fact that the droppings from tuberculous cows, render cultures of tubercular germs.

Making Money On the Farm

VII.—Small Grain Breeding

By C. V. GREGORY, Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture" Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association

SMALL grain breeding is second only to corn breeding in importance. Indeed, there is even more chance for improvement along this line, since so little has been done already.

Selection the Basis of Improvement. The requirements of the various grains vary with the use to which they are to be put, but the yield is an important point with all.

Another point to be considered is the tendency to stool. In localities where the summers are cool and late varieties can be grown, a tendency to stool considerably is desirable.

These individual head tests are carried on in much the same manner as the individual ear tests with corn.

Increasing the Yields. In the fall the rows should be carefully examined. Some will be lodged badly. Others will have poorly filled, short heads.

Beardless barley is a little less hardy and yields a little less than the bearded sorts, but the convenience of handling more than makes up for this. There are two types of barley, the six rowed varieties have given the best satisfaction in this country.
