GRANGE CROP REPORTING.

A Pomona Grange in New York Organizes a System of Information.

As a practical move for the better information of its members as to an intelligent knowledge of crop acreage and crop prospects Onondaga county Pomona has undertaken a system of crop reporting which has been in successful operation for a year and has been attended with such signal success as to warrant its continuance and extension for another year.

The plan in brief, says W. N. Giles in Grange Review, is a system of correspondence conducted from one central office. The correspondent in chief has two or more correspondents in each grange, according to size of grange and amount of territory to be covered. From the central office is issued a blank to the various correspondents, who fill the same from general knowledge as to number of acres, average yield and amount in stock of the various crops in Onondaga county. These cover hay, cabbage and potatoes. They are compiled at various seasons, so that a very accurate knowledge is obtained. These statements are returned to the central office and there compiled and results sent confidentially to the grange members that give them valuable information as to the probable rise and fall of prices as governed by supply and demand, and this has already resulted in much advantage to the members.

This plan has proved of much practical value in Onondaga county and is a promise of much greater value if other and all counties would take it up and there could be established a general correspondence between counties. Of necessity much of the detail and all of the results must be conducted confidentially and hence cannot be elaborated in the public press.

The Wisconsin State Grange.

The Wisconsin grange met at Winneconne and elected George R. Schaefer master. The resolutions deplore the lack of development of the binder industry at the state prison, denounce ship subsidies and all attacks on the Groat law, favor an income tax, government supervision of express companies, postal savings banks, the parcels post and also, we regret to say, the initiative and referendum.

Grange and Farm Institutes.

W. I. Chamberlain says in National Stockman that he has observed that the liveliest, best and most instructive institutes are those held where a live grange or farmers' club exists. In such places all the details that insure success are well cared for.

Being in love with more than one girl at a time is the way that the average young man has of insuring himself against damages to his affections.

Don't waste too much time in talking. The logic of events is the only thing that most of us understand anyway.

The lazy man is simply a man who is economical of his strength and energy and who believes in conserving his resources.

You have to work like a drudge to get anything that is worth while and, after all, take long chances on its proving so.

The entertainment lasted until 11 p. m. and was followed by the basket social which lasted several hours later.

Lost Motion.

Coming and going,
Forward and back,
Turning and doubling
Off on the track,
Winning or losing
Fame or a bet,
That is too often
Far as we get.

Rushing in fury

Hither and there,
Now on his uppers,
Now in the air;
Getting in trouble
Up to his neck,
Patiently saving
Dross from the wreck.

Plenty of motion,

Much of it lost,
Hardly the candle
Worthy the cost.
Action, reaction,
Each in the play,
Just about equal
Day after day.

There you may view it.

That is the race,
Human we call it,
But what a chase,
Winding up nowhere,
Laid on the shelf!
Why is man ever
Stuck on himself?

Exciting.

"Making any money?"
"No."
"Thought you said you were awfully busy?"
"I am."
"What doing?"
"Dodging trouble."

Lost Opportunities.

"One day isn't enough for Christmas. It should be extended at least over three."
"What do you want with so much of it?"
"Well, I have three invitations to dinner."
