Losing His Mind.

"Mother, guess you'd better send for the doctor," gasped Uncle Charlie Seaver as he sank into a chair and rocked back and forth, holding his gray head.

"Sakes alive! Ye haven't been and got the misery in yer head, have ye, Sakes!" gasped his astonished wife, dropping a pie tin.

"I dunno what's the matter, but I've always had a hunch my mind 'd go some time. It's cum, I guess. I noticed th' trouble first last week when I plumb forget to go up an' swear off th' $100 assessment till it was too late. Then I neglected to go to th' school meetin' last night to fight agin the new commissioner. But, wuss and wuss, I didn't guess within eleven pound seven ounces of th' weight of Wal Weaver's big hog killed today. I guess my mind has gone all right. I'm about all in."

ALL the world's a stage, and the box office receipts are as disappointing as those of any other mediocre stage.

The only men who ever know all about women fall to be born.

Women aren't really afraid of mice. They only let men think they are because men want to think so. It gives a man a chance to be brave and heroic in his own eyes without the slightest personal risk. Clever women!

Conscience may be a handicap, but it seldom works to hurt anything.
