The committee is getting arrangements well in hand for a big Fourth of July celebration.

There was a time when the honest farmer was looked upon with scorn and contempt by the residents of the city. But now the farmer has a bank account and pays his bills by check.

He calls up his customers over the telephone, sells his produce to them and delivers it in his own automobile. In the winter time, he takes his wife and goes to California, or to Florida, leaving the hired man to do the chores and keep house. In fact, these days, the farmer is all and somewhat, and the resident of the city, envious of such prosperity, is putting his savings into desert lands, and reading up on the enormous sums to be made from apple orchards, peach orchards, mushroom caves, asparagus beds, onion patches and radish outputs, fondly thinking that he can do the same thing. Thus, the adage, "Back to the farm," is receiving new illustrations day by day.
