Connecticut State Grange.

At the twenty-fifth annual session of the Connecticut state grange, held at Hartford Jan. 12-14, State Master L. H. Healey of Woodstock was re-elected, Gilbert A. Vincent of Kent was elected overseer and J. A. Sherwood of Easton lecturer. The chief items of business were the report of the taxation committee recommending that franchises should be returned as property and taxed; also favoring graduated inheritance tax beginning at $10,000; also that private property should be returned for tax to the true value in money. A long discussion was held on the defeat of the public utilities bill at the last session of the legislature, and the passage of such a bill was again demanded. The grange also favored the present form of representation in the national grange—that is to say, not the proportional representation plan. The committee on education urged the passage by congress of the so called Davis educational bill. It also favored the juvenile grange. The Patrons' Exchange reported a very successful year's work. It has declared a dividend of 20 per cent. The Patrons' Insurance company has in force $1,318,000 in insurance. H. E. Loomis of Glastonbury was elected president for the ensuing year.

Illinois State Grange.

At the recent annual session of the Illinois state grange resolutions were adopted favoring election of United States senators by direct vote, a general parcels post law, local option, state aid for public highway improvement, placing registration fee of automobiles in the treasury of the state highway commission for use in improving public roads, deep waterway from the great lakes to the gulf, the continuance of the tax on colored oleomargarine, postal savings banks, conservation of our natural resources and against ship subsidy.

We all know that we are not hard to please, and anybody can do it who will have the sense to set about it in the right way.

The truth that looks a good deal like a lie is apt soon to find itself in the company of choice inventions.

THE MAIL ORDER BUSINESS.

Its Progress Keeping the Local Merchants Struggling For Existence.

The marvelous growth of the mail order business in recent years is calculated to stagger humanity in local communities where general merchants or specialists in any sort of merchandise are struggling for an existence against the gigantic concerns in the big cities which have back of them the power of millions of dollars capital. A writer in the Saturday Evening Post says that in June, 1906, a large mail order house was reorganized. The concern's total assets were valued at $10,000,000. It issued preferred stock to that amount and common stock representing good will to the amount of $30,000,000.

To appraise the good will of a merchandising concern—which, in the nature of the case, could have no monopolistic advantages—at $3 for every dollar of its tangible assets seemed rather excessive. As a matter of fact, the common stock sold as low as $20 a share. But for some time it has been steadily rising, and it now sells at $120 a share.

A syndicate of shrewd capitalists intimately acquainted with the business is said to have bought a large block of it at a high figure. At current quotations, then, this concern's mere good will is valued at $30,000,000. Moreover, this house was founded not many years ago by men of small means, and the tangible assets of $10,000,000 at the time of reorganization were composed very largely of accumulated profits.

So we have a total value of about $40,000,000 created or built up within a comparatively few years in the business of selling at retail groceries, dry goods, furniture, and so on, to farmers, villagers and the residents of the smaller towns and cities throughout the country.

The local merchant finds himself up against a proposition that means a fight to the finish for self preservation. The lightweight as to capitalization is pitted against the heavyweight. If the townsmen and personal friends of the lightweight fail to back him in the ring there is a likelihood of a knockout in an early round. They can back him by giving him the cheerful aid of trading at home instead of increasing the advantage of the heavyweight by doing catalogue buying.

PAINTING THE RURAL HOUSES

Good Judgment Necessary In Selecting Colors to Make Town Attractive.

One of the principal things that goes far in the improvement of a town and which first attracts the attention of visitors is the selection of colors for painting the houses in rural communities. It is an easy matter for any citizen who has the welfare of his town at heart to select a color for his house that will harmonize with everything around his home. The safe colors for a house, besides red, are white, gray, yellow and brown. Yellow or gray, with white trimmings, suits many a plain pitch roofed or square colonial house. Grays and browns are good for ugly nondescript ones, the grays always being pleasanter on the yellow shades than on cold blue tones. White suggests the formal type again. It is a very good color for a country house, showing it up from a distance in fascinating glimpses, for it needs trees about it and flowers to sparkle against its walls. Such a house will be attractive when the leaves are gone from the trees, for the bare boughs will serve to soften the effect.

Beauty Without and Within.

"We are coming," says President Luther of Trinity college in the Chronicle of Elyria, O., "to understand that not only should our bridges be beautiful, but our public buildings must be beautiful, our river banks must be beautiful and, the homes of the poor as well as those of the rich must be beautiful and, being beautiful, will be such as the poor as well as the rich can live in safely, profitably, wisely. As we clean and beautify and make splendid the cities and the towns in which we live, as we tie them together into more and more efficient corporate units, struggling for the common welfare of us all, we shall find that the unlovely things in human nature, in our own nature, the dishonesties, the foulness, the dishonors that have held back so long and so terribly the progress of mankind will be more and more impossible. A city materially beautiful will be spiritually beautiful also."

Ministers Aboard Ship.

A minister aboard ship has always been taken as a "Jonah sign" by seamen. In recent years, however, this superstition has been modified to a certain extent. A young minister, the seamen believe, will not bring as much of a "Jonah" with him as an old one.
