CARE OF THE JEWEL CASE.

How to Clean and Brighten Real and Artificial Stones.

Prepared chalk is the best all round cleanser for jewelry of all descriptions. A small box of the chalk is, as a matter of fact, as important in the dressing case as a clean chamolva leather, with which silver buttons and buckles can be brightened. An excellent method of combining the two is that of inclosing the block of chalk in a leather bag drawn around the neck with a tape, which can be used both to keep it intact and to act as a polisher.

For gold chains there is nothing to equal a paste made of chalk and methylated spirit, while a fine brush must be used after the paste has dried on so as to clear it of powder and give a brilliant polish. Benzine is sometimes employed by jewelers in cleaning precious stones. It should not, of course, be allowed to touch pearls or even turquoises, moonstones or opals, all of which require the greatest care in their treatment and are the first to show signs of neglect.

In the case of diamonds, sapphires, rubies and emeralds the benzine treatment may be tried, however, provided great care is observed, as benzine fumes are very inflammable.

The rings, if set into claw settings and other small items, should be collected and laid to soak in a little benzine, after which the jewels should be washed in ordinary soap and water, rinsed in cold water and finally placed on a cloth to drain. Experts further dip the jewels in alcohol, so as to evaporate the remaining water, damp of any description being certain to dull the surface of the newly cleaned stone.

To keep jewelry in sawdust is the very best method of obviating the constant cleaning which would otherwise be necessary, and it is an excellent plan to keep a small bag made of chamolva leather in the dressing case, filling this with sawdust and using it to hold all brooches, earrings and rings which are not actually in daily use.

It is not, however, only real jewels which put a tax on time and patience when away from home. The many secondary gems which are used for buckles, earrings and chains, as well as the hatpins, which seem to get more and more ornate every day, require even greater attention. Old paste is best cleaned with dry prepared chalk. The same treatment agrees also with such stones as peridots or marquisate. It is never advisable to allow imitation stones to become wet, while a damp paste, moreover, which in some cases would do no harm to the gem itself, might loosen the setting.

CLEANING OF FURS.

How It Can Be Done by the Use of Simple Remedies.

Ermine and mink are best cleaned with soft flannel. Rub the fur well against the grain, then dip the flannel into common flour and rub the fur until clean; shake the fur and again rub it with a fresh piece of soft, clean, new flannel till the flour is out. By this process the color of the ermine is preserved, and the lining need not be removed. Sable, chinchilla, squirrel, etc., are cleaned with new bran, which must be warmed very carefully in a pan, but not burnt; therefore while waiting stir it frequently. Rub the warm bran into the fur for some time, shake it and brush until free from bran. The fur will clean better if the stuffing and lining are removed and the article laid as straight and flat as possible on a table or board.

Well brush the fur before it is cleaned, and if there are any moth eaten parts they must be removed and replaced with new pieces. The following method is said to be adopted in Russia: Some dry flour is put into a pan upon the stove and heated, being stirred constantly with the hand as long as the heat can be borne. Then the flour is spread all over the fur and rubbed in well. It is then brushed gently with a very clean brush or beaten softly till all the flour is removed. It is claimed that this method will make the fur appear almost new.

Through a Big Telescope. The first look through a great telescope is disappointing, but the novice soon sees that the flat appearance which the heavens present to the naked eye is replaced by a curious concavity; the moon and stars seem to be hung in space rather than spread out on a flat surface. For a moment one feels at the telescope like a child watching the swift moving balls kept in the air by a juggler and expecting to see one of those great, bright bodies fall. Then comes the thought, What keeps them there, apparently suspended in space with absolutely nothing to hold them firm? The explanation of the bearded astronomer causes the brain of the layman to whirl, and he sees himself, perhaps for the first time, as a child gathering pebbles on the great shores of the sea of knowledge or as "an infant in the night, an infant crying for the light, and with no language but a cry."—National Maga-
