UPPER LATOURELL

How delightful it is to wake up in the morning by the sweet songs of the birds, that make their home in the trees outside your windows; how different rural life to that of the city life. When in town the rumbling of the street cars and all kinds of wagons disturb your slumber before four in the morning, in all instance rural life is more peaceful, and have so many privileges that is denied our city sisters and brothers. I do not think anybody has a better chance, than the farmers to make up a good healthful home.

In all instances rural life could be more pleasant, if the farmers would take more interest in beautifying their places. One thing that is within reach of everybody is cleanliness, clean both in and outside, have a place for everything, and your home will be more attractive. If we do our work by some kind of a system, it will be accomplished with less labor.

It is near Easter now, and with Easter comes the awakening to new life, and it seems like one has a craving for freshening up around us. Let us welcome nature with a smile, as it is doing its utmost to bring forth an abundance of blessings for us to enjoy.
