One of the commendable things that the Commercial Club took up at its Friday evening meeting was a resolution to the council suggesting that it find a way to locate saloons away from street corners. This is surely a step in the right direction. But the same idea has been up before and never came to anything. Let us hope it will fare better this time.

The biggest month in colonization movements Oregon has ever had has just closed, bringing thousands of new citizens to the state. Favorable rates attracted people from all parts of the country who are valuable additions to the population. Every part of the state has profited by the heavy gain in new people. It is up to the older residents to make the newcomers feel at home for if they like this state they will induce their friends back home to come out also.

A fellow by the name of Heitkemper has invented or introduced or grown a new breed of potatoes in this state. That of itself is nothing so extraordinary, but his potato is red, though, and he presumes to put it on the market in opposition to our old time friend that is beautifully white, and that breaks open when boiled or baked and turns out a dinner of the finest white starch. Imagine red starch. Imagine a red potato, buttered, and salted, taking the place of the historic tuber.

Sixty days ago North Plains, Oregon's newest town, had a population of less than a dozen persons and on the townsite stood a frame building, a tent and the framework for the water tower. Sunday, April 16, North Plains safely claimed a permanent population of 200, with 40 buildings complete or nearly so. Streets are graded, sidewalks laid, water and lighting systems available to all town property and portions of the acreage and several brick buildings are contemplated.

The movement on the part of the Municipal Association in Portland to bring the recall on the office of the district attorney will find a lot of approval outside of Portland as well as in the city. A good many people in the vicinity of Gresham have not forgotten the way the Twelve Mile case, relative to the false application for license, was disposed of. Everyone knew there was falsification in the matter. There was absolutely no excuse for anything else than conviction, and the case was allowed to drop. The people near Lents will welcome a chance to sign a recall petition for several hundred people down there have their arms out for the departed president of the Mt. Scott bank. It appears that Mr. Cameron is not overly anxious to secure that official, that he did not go after the case in any way whatever, and now that it is certain that Meyers is guilty, he cannot be found in any part of the country. Cameron counsels waiting till he returns when he may be taken without difficulty. The moral condition in Portland is a matter of knowledge to everyone that lives in the town or reads the papers. The chief of police represents to be surprised when he is reminded of conditions, acts offended that such reflections on his integrity are even considered. Private detectives dig up the truth and force it into notice and now comes the district attorney and denies the truthfulness of the finding. In short, what has Mr. Cameron done? Banker Morris is still at large. Banker Ross is spending the season at some convenient pleasure resort. Banker Moore is running a little business of his own, and the city of Portland, Multnomah county, is rotten with dives and roadhouses, unlicensed, thieves and burglars, and bums, gambling dens, blind pigs, and organized villainy of all sorts. The time seems to be gone by when the district attorney originates investigation. It is perfectly proper for the district attorney to officially look into the legal and moral status of conditions and people and institutions throughout his district, and to bring charges himself. It is rather the plan of the office these days to discourage investigation, delay adjudication and stay the process of the law in most of the instances where quick action would not only be a matter of justice, but practical economy as well.

Saved His Mother's Life.
"For doctors had given me up," writes Mrs. Laura Gains, of Avoca, La., "and my children and all my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, and they have done me a world of good. I will always praise them." Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders. Use them and gain new health, strength and vigor. They're guaranteed to satisfy or money refunded. Only 50c at all druggists.

POULTRY BREEDERS ATTENTION

WE HAVE made arrangements with the Northwest Poultry Journal of Salem, Oregon, the largest poultry magazine published in the Northwest, to furnish both the Northwest Poultry Journal and the American Poultry World, largest in the United States (the regular prices for these journals is $0.50 per year, each) and Herald one year for $1.75.

PRINTED POINTED POINTERS

PRINTER'S ink, with all its magic, is not alone sufficient to give pre-eminence. Alone it can do little more than daub and smear, but tempered and applied with brains it illumines the way to and unhinges the portals of the world's markets, making possession easy. The Northwest Poultry Journal has 7 departments, 11 correspondents, monthly articles on feeding and care, showing and judging, poultry buildings and fixtures, eggs and how to get the most, incubators, brooders and how to operate them, turkeys, ducks and geese, pigeons, also a kennel department.

ITS ADVERTISERS are reliable. They are the up-to-date poultrymen of the day. In buying their stock or eggs you buy from the best breeders in the business. The Northwest Poultry Journal is interested in your state, yes in your district, yes in your very community and home. We are in the business to aid the poultry industry all we can, in every way we can, and you will find in it only the latest news and the most up-to-date methods. Support then, a journal that builds up your territory and your industry. Our specific territory: California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Colorado, Utah, Montana and Canada. Call in our office and see specimen copy.
