NEW TALL CROWNED SAILOR.

Here is the most radical change in sailor hat styles that has been seen in many a day. The crown of this new sailor is almost three times as high as the brim is wide, and the very broad velvet band and bow increase the appearance of height materially. Naturally this new high crowned sailor will be a bit trying, especially at first, until the lines of the shape have become familiar, but the hat is really no higher than some of the low crowned sailors of previous seasons. The big crown settles down over the head almost to the tops of the ears, and the brim at the bottom of this big structure of crown surrounds the face like an outstanding frame.

For Afternoon Wear.

Tailored wear is the approved style of costume for afternoon dress, but now French tailored garb is anything but severe and utilitarian in type. This charming suit is built of snow white cloth over a petticoat of black velvet, and the wide black velvet collar adds a distinctive touch. The buttons are white crocheted, with hand worked buttonholes between each pair. With this suit will be worn buttoned boots of white buckskin, with black patent leather vamp.

TAILORIED SUIT OF WHITE CLOTH.

velvet, and the wide black velvet collar adds a distinctive touch. The buttons are white crocheted, with hand worked buttonholes between each pair. With this suit will be worn buttoned boots of white buckskin, with black patent leather vamp.

Cleaning a Woolen Skirt.

A small amount of soap tree bark will easily clean a black woolen skirt. Put the bark into a gallon of water and set it on the stove, allowing it to boil ten minutes. Then strain and pour the strained water into a tub containing sufficient amount of warm water to wash the skirt. Rub thoroughly in this water. Do not use a board, but rub the garment between the hands.

Put the strained water back on the stove with cold water and heat it just warm enough for rinsing water. Rinse the skirt in this and hang out to dry. When it is almost dry take it from the line and iron it on the wrong side while it is still damp.

A bit of old kid glove or old canvas sewed under the bands of the skirt just where the hooks and eyes are to be placed will prevent the bands tearing away.

To Prevent Drafts.

A simple yet practical way to prevent drafts entering under doors that have wide cracks under them is to fold three thicknesses of paper together just the width of the door and two inches deep and cover it with serge or cloth as near the color of the door as possible.

Now to this three small brass rings one and a quarter inches from each end and one in the middle. Fasten into the bottom of the door three small screw hooks and hang the rings to them. This will be a perfect protection from cold air coming under the door and one that is easily removed and kept free from dust.

The KITCHEN GUPBOARD

HOMEMADE GINGERBREAD.

POET has sung with reason the charm of homemade gingerbread, "that fragrant unimer shadowed cake." Made well, gingerbread is delicious; otherwise it is an abomination. If possible it should be served hot, well spiced and moist rather than dry. In families where there are children gingerbread is a desirable addition to the dessert list, for eaten in moderation it satisfies the childish craving for sweets and yet is thoroughly wholesome.

A True and Tried Recipe.

Soft Gingerbread.—Take six cups of flour, a cupful each of milk and lard, three cupfuls of New Orleans molasses, two teaspoonfuls of soda, three eggs and two tablespoonfuls of ginger. Beat the yolks of the eggs and add to them the lard, the milk, soda, molasses, ginger and flour in the order named. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth and add them to the gingerbread mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour.

Cheap Gingerbread.—Combine in the order named the following ingredients: A cupful of molasses, a teaspoonful of soda, a tablespoonful each of ginger and melted butter, a half teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of hot milk and two cupfuls of flour. Bake in a deep square pan which has been well greased.

For the Children.

Gingerbread Cakes.—To one pound of sifted flour allow half a pound of pounded loaf sugar, three-quarters of a pound of fresh butter, one pound molasses, one nutmeg grated, the weight of a nutmeg of pounded mace and as much of pounded cinnamon, one ounce of pounded ginger, one ounce and a half of candied orange and lemon peel cut small, one-half ounce of blanched sweet almonds cut in long thin bits and two well beaten eggs. Melt the butter with the molasses and when nearly cold stir in the eggs and the rest of the ingredients. Mix all well together, make into round cakes and bake upon tins.

Lemon Gingerbread.—Grate the rind of three lemons. Mix the juice with sugar to sweeten. Mix the rind with a pound of flour. Add half a pound of New Orleans molasses, half a pound of melted butter and the lemon juice. Mix altogether with a half ounce of ginger and bake in a slow oven.

NOVEL ACCESSORIES.

Corsage Flowers the Rage—Bronze, Gold and Blue Roses.

Corsage and millinery flowers are as variable these days as though a Burbank were at work among them, getting new varieties. One of the most attractive is a large pink rose, which has each petal outlined with tiny gold beads.

Another flower or ornament having some semblance of one is made entirely of loops of beads clustered together—bronze and violet and gold and blue and rose.

A very odd and pretty novelty for the hat is a great chestnut bur, open, with the "burs" represented by brown

The Rev. Mr. Muldoon

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Jack," said Deacon Henderson to his daughter, Jacqueline, "a new minister is coming to occupy the pulpit made vacant by Jornegan, whom you drove out of it."

"Papa!"

"You know very well that you flirted with him, then refused him."

"But I didn't drive him away."

"When he handed me his resignation he told me that it would be impossible for him to live near you and forget you."

Jackeline hung her head.

"This young man who is coming in his place has been accepted at my invitation because he is painfully homesick. He has fiery red hair and freckles; he is long boned and disjointed."

"What has that got to do with it?"

"A great deal. It is impossible for you to let a handsome, attractive man alone. I expect Mr. Muldoon to repel you by his ugliness. We are getting tired of bunting up ministers for you to make fools of and drive away. We are going to try one of a different kind."

"Why not get an old married man?"

"You know very well what the salary is. If we should do as you suggest we would have a family to support besides the minister, and we are too poor for that."

"Well, papa, if Mr. Muldoon is as hideous as you say I don't think you will be put to the trouble of getting another man on my account."

The first Sunday the new clergyman preached Jacqueline was indisposed and should not have gone to church, but she was so curious to know how homely he really was that she went to hear and see him. He was homelier than he had been painted. Besides his natural blemishes there was an artificial one. When a boy he had fallen against a buzzsaw, which had left a frightful scar on his left cheek. Then when preaching, having made a point that especially pleased him, he would smile, and the contortion his face took on was expressive of a pain in his stomach.

At first it did not seem to Jacqueline that she could endure to look at him. But he had a remarkable intellect and the gift of expressing his ideas in words. For a while she listened to him with her eyes turned away. By degrees she was enabled to endure the sight of him for a few minutes at a time, and before the end of his sermon she had quite forgotten his ugliness.

The next Sunday she was obliged to begin all over again, but the process of getting used to looking upon him, his fiery red hair, his scarred cheek and worst of all that dreadful smile at clinching an argument, required less time than the Sunday before. Moreover, his intellectual part began to influence her. What comprehensive ideas! What heart! What a different way of looking at things from the cut and dried theology that had come down through the centuries! How her heart bled for those whom he pictured driven by their surrounding circumstances into crime. "The children of the poor," he said, "are sent to jail, the children of the rich to dancing school."

And so he accounted for that growing criminality among the children and youth of the land, sifting more and more the columns of the newspapers, illustrating their inevitable course by such graphic words as those quoted. Jacqueline went home from church and all the rest of the day was thinking on that fearful procession of little children with but one path before them, and that leading to crime. And mingled with this picture was the face of the minister, but one engaging feature in it—sympathy lighted by protest against this human injustice.

For a time Jacqueline tried to stop her ears against this childish wail. Any effort to relieve it seemed hopeless. But she was at last won over by the minister's exhortation to work under the inspiration of faith and leave the rest to Providence. And so under his direction she became the leader of an association of women workers in the field of charity. While the handsome, gentlemanlike pastors of her church had discoursed to her from the pulpit upon theological principles that had been wrangled over for ages and at other times had poured soft nothings into her willing ear this "fright" by a sympathy for his fellow beings had unconsciously walked by a straight path to her heart. The hair was still a fiery red; the scar, the excruciating smile, were as hideous as before, but not to her, for she did not see them. They had been obscured by a divine light that emanated from the spiritual part of this repellent body. One day the deacon, Jacqueline's father, said to her:

"Jack, I have noticed that you are taking a great interest in the work inspired by Mr. Muldoon. I brought him here thinking that his ugliness would protect him. I fear that it has failed."

"Father," said the girl impressively, "when again you choose for such a purpose a homely man to occupy the pulpit of our church I would advise you to select one without the gift of intellectuality and the divine attributes of a real Christian. If you intend to warn me it is too late. But this time it is he who has won the game, not I. Last evening while here he asked me to be his wife, and I gladly consented."

Edwin Hawley, the noted railroad man, likened by many to E. H. Harriman, who died suddenly in New York.

NAME WOMEN ASSESSORS

Spokane Official Aims to Get Levy on Feminine Adornments.

Spokane, Wash.—Seven women will be appointed deputies by Glenn R. Creighton, assessor of Spokane county, and he expects these assistants to make a cleanup of property hitherto unrevealed. He sees no reason why, when there are women jurors, bailiffs, policemen and clerks, there should not be women assessors and will assign them to the sections where the more wealthy live, so they can get on the taxrolls at proper valuation the diamonds and other jewelry, laces, rugs and expensive frippery of their sisters.

Asylum Cuts Prune Diet.

Salem, Or.—Although located in the heart of one of the largest prune sections on the coast, it has been discovered that the state insane asylum has cut out a diet of prunes for patients and that this winter the attendants and inmates are eating California figs instead.

This, it is said by Superintendent Steiner, has been the direct result of the high prune prices.

England Gives Enthusiastic Greeting.

London.—England gave a joyous welcome to King George and Queen Mary when the monarchs returned from their three months' journey to India, whither they had traveled in state to be crowned Emperor and Empress of India.

Miners Fight Tariff Cut.

Wallace, Ida.—Prominent Mining operators of the Coeur d'Alene district assembled here and unanimously urged that a protest be sent to Representatives in congress against the Underwood metal tariff revision bill.

DR. HAZZARD GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Seattle.—Mrs. Linda Burfield Hazzard, the Seattle "starvation doctor," was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury in the Kitsap county court at Port Orchard for having caused the death by starvation of Miss Claire Williamson, an English heiress who underwent Mrs. Hazzard's fasting treatment.

Mrs. Linda Burfield Hazzard was arrested August 5, 1911, on a charge of murder in the first degree, on an information filed in Kitsap county, the complaining witness being Miss Dorothea Williamson.

The Williamsons were English women of means who were on a tour around the world and who consulted Mrs. Hazzard concerning their health. Mrs. Hazzard soon had both the women in her starvation sanitarium at Olalla, where, on a diet of orange juice and asparagus broth, Claire died May 9, 1911, and Dorothea was wasted to a skeleton.
