The funeral of Mrs. J. H. Heslin held in the M. E. church here last Sunday afternoon was largely attended. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The services were conducted by A. J. Josslyn, the music in charge of Rev. Dr. Cathey, both old friends of Mrs. Heslin, all three being pioneers. Mrs. Heslin came here with her parents in 1850. She was then two years old. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dunbar and was born in St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 25, 1845. Mrs. Heslin and her brother, D. S. Dunbar, who is now the only surviving member of the family, have lived here on a part of the old Dunbar donation land claim ever since, except for a year spent by Mr. Dunbar in Goldendale, Wash. Both were members of the Pioneer Association and have regularly attended its annual gatherings. On Feb. 2, 1865, Miss Drusella Dunbar was married to J. P. Heslin and to this union was born 12 children 6 of whom died in early childhood. The other six, who with their father remain to mourn the loss of a kind and loving wife and mother, are E. E. Heslin, John Heslin, and Claud Heslin, all of Fairview, Mrs. Anna Heiney, Miss Calla Heslin and Miss Ethyl Thompson, all of Portland. All the children were with their mother at the last. The young people from different parts of the surrounding country were here, and remained for the dance also, which was quite a successful affair.

One day last week Mr. Brown had the misfortune to have one of his horses seriously injured by a runaway horse hitched to a wood cart. He was going up Latourell hill with a heavy load of farm machinery when, seeing his danger he tried to get out of the way. This was prevented by some wood which was piled at one side. The result was that one shaft struck his horse going entirely through its leg. There was considerable excitement for a while, but finally the injured horse was taken to a stable and cared for as well as possible. On Sunday it seemed a little better and there seemed a chance for its recovery but that night it became fast in its stall and died.

Too Familiar With Quotations.

The principal of a Boston school who requests that his name be withheld in order that he may maintain discipline in his classrooms tells this: "When I was teaching in a school in the western part of the state some years ago I had some trouble in maintaining order among the girls of my classes. They were continually playing tricks on me and each other in the classrooms, and I decided to stop it. The next day, following a breach of discipline, I ordered two of the girls to remain after school and gave them two long problems that kept them for a long time. At the opening of school the following morning I opened the day as usual by asking each member of the class for a quotation. One of the girls rose and quoted, 'With all thy faults I love thee still,' and the other, 'The hours I spend with thee, dear heart, are as a string of pearls to me.'"
 —Boston Herald.

Different Points of View.

"Good morning, Jones."
 "Good morning, Brown. Any news today?"
 "Well, yes. You know my brother who works at the bank? Well, he went to business the other day and found $1,000 on the counter. And what do you think he did? Stole the money and tripped off to Canada. And when the news reached my father it broke the old man's heart!"
 "That's funny. You know, my brother works at a bank, too, and when he went to business the other morning he found $1,000. And what do you think he did?"
 "What—stole it?"
 "No; took it straight to the manager's office. And when the news reached my father, do you know it broke the old man's heart!"—London Tit-Bits.

Danger Ahead!

A battleship was cautiously feeling her way through a fog. Suddenly the navigator on the bridge heard church bells startlingly near. As he believed the land to be some miles away he turned to the engine telegraph and ordered the leadman to sound. The sounding showed plenty of water. Again the church bells pealed clear and near. The navigator paled a little, and his jaw set. In face of danger he must keep his wits about him. His glance met the face of the helmsman.

"What the dickens are you grinning at?" the navigator demanded sharply. Choking back his emotion, the man explained that one of his mates had got a new record of a peal of church bells and he was trying it on his gramophone.—London Answers.

Gilbert of Colchester.

Gilbert of Colchester, who flourished three centuries ago, has been called the founder of the science of electricity. Gilbert discovered the augmentation of the power of a loadstone by arming or capping it with soft iron cheeks, the screening effect of a sheet of iron, the method of magnetizing iron by hammering it while it lies north and south, the destruction of magnetism by heat and the existence around the magnet of a magnetic field. Generalizing from small to large, he advanced the entirely novel idea that the globe of the earth is itself a magnet.

Words Lamb Didn't Like.

Who would have thought that these respectable words were banned by Charles Lamb as detestable novelties? "Physical," he says, "vile word. Apathetic, vile word. Reaction, vile slang. Mechanically—faugh!" Now, physical is in Shakespeare, not in the sense to which we are now used, but meaning medicinal. Coriolanus makes light of the blood letting of his wound and says it is physical to him.—London Standard.

His Comeback.

"But," the father objected, "you have never shown that you are capable of supporting a wife."
 "Oh," the young man replied, "if you want her to marry a widower I'll have to confess that I can't qualify."—Chicago Record Herald.

Spiteful.

Miss Oldgirl—I don't like the color of my hair. Miss Youngthing—Don't let that bother you, my dear. It can't be long now before it turns gray.

His Hope.

Barber—Will you have anything on your face when I have finished, sir? Victim—I don't know, but I hope you'll leave my nose at least.

We hate some persons because we do not know them, and we will not know them because we hate them.—Colton.

Three Vital Reasons

"I want to give every person not using electric light THREE vital reasons why the MAZDA LAMP should make them have their houses, stores, office or factory wired.

First:

The MAZDA LAMP gives nearly THREE TIMES THE LIGHT of the ordinary carbon incandescent.

Second:

It COSTS NO MORE to burn.

Third:

The QUALITY of light is vastly superior—a clear, white light like sun rays."
