Johnson Was a Mighty Eater.

Many men of great intellectual power have been large eaters. Luther, Goethe and Walter Scott were mighty trenchermen. Charles V. shortened his life by gluttony. It is recorded by Boswell that on a certain night at supper Dr. Johnson discoursed of good eating with uncommon satisfaction. We know from the same authority how studiously the sage minded his stomach. "When at table," says Boswell, "he was totally absorbed in the business of the moment. His eyes seemed riveted to his plate, nor would he, unless when in very high company, say one word or even pay the least attention to what was said by others till he had satisfied his appetite, which was so fierce and indulged with such intensity that while in the act of eating the veins of his forehead swelled and gradually a strong perspiration was visible."

The squeamish person who reads these unpleasant details must remember that Johnson had in his days of obscurity known by experience what fasting was, and once, in writing to a publisher, had added "impransus" to his name. The voracity then acquired remained with him when his dinner was no longer a daily problem.

Hats Worn at Table.

Seventeenth century etiquette prescribed that hats should be worn at table. "The Rules of Civility, or Certain Ways of Deportment," published in 1673, gives some directions on this point. Under the supposition that "a person of quality detains you to dine with him" it is laid down that "when the person invited is seated he must keep himself uncovered till the rest sit down and the person of quality has put on his hat. * * * If the person of honor drinks a health to you, you must be sure to be uncovered. If he speaks to you, you must likewise be uncovered till you have answered him. If one rises from the table before the rest he must pull off his hat."

A trace of this etiquette lingers in the house of commons, where a member is always allowed to wear his hat only when seated.—London Graphic.

A Pessimist.

"Don't be too anxious to get a husband," said the wise matron. "Don't go around hunting for one." "Think I should just sit down and wait for one, eh?" replied the maiden. "Yes, for you'll sit up and wait for one often enough after you've got him."

CHANGED THE PLAY.

Peter the Great Turned the Comedy Into a Tragedy.

It is related that Peter the Great, that mighty czar of Russia, strolling incognito through the camp, came upon a party of noncommissioned officers and grenadiers enacting a comedy, which he paused to witness.

All at once his brow became clouded. In the play a soldier in the uniform of his guard commits at a certain moment a robbery. Nevertheless the emperor allowed the play to proceed. The court martial is summoned on the stage and the thief is sentenced to death. The spectators, composed of officers and men, showed the most lively concern in the performance and laughed at the grotesque contortions of the condemned culprit. The amateur actor played his part very well. Here come the squad that is to execute him. "Fire!" orders the lieutenant, and the amateur dropped down dead, his heart pierced by seven bullets—no make believe, but dead in deed.

Whereupon the emperor dropped his incognito and addressed those assembled: "A soldier of my guard who committed a robbery must die. If he did not steal why did he boast of it and soil his uniform? It is I who ordered the loaded rifles given to the men. I henceforth forbid my soldiers to ply the trade of mummers."—Argonaut.

PHILADELPHIA SCRAPPLE.

How to Prepare This Inexpensive and Highly Nutritious Dish.

Have your butcher clean a pig's head and split it in halves. Put it into a stock pot and cover with boiling water. Cook until meat falls from the bones. Remove the meat, strain the liquor and set aside to cool. Remove most of the fat, all gristle and bones. Chop meat fine.

Remove fat from liquor, place on range, bring to boiling point, add meat and one pound of beef liver previously ly parboiled ten minutes and cut in very small pieces. Season with salt, pepper and sage to taste. Add one cupful of buckwheat mixed with one cupful of cornmeal, letting it slip through the fingers of the left hand while you stir briskly with the right. Thicken with cornmeal until mixture is the consistency of cornmeal mush. Stir until free from lumps. Remove to back of range and simmer two or three hours. Use a heavy vessel to cook the mixture in. This lessens the danger of scorching.

Pour mixture into brick shaped bread pans previously wet with cold water. When cold cut in half inch slices and saute in a well greased hot spider. Brown on both sides. Serve for breakfast or luncheon. This is an inexpensive dish and is highly nutritious and will keep several weeks in cold weather.—National Food Magazine.

High Living in Germany.

The Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin publishes an urgent appeal to German society leaders to return to "simple eating." It says that the luxury era in Germany has caused an extravagance in dining which threatens financial impoverishment and digestive ruin. Carlsbad, Marienbad, Kissingen and other spas which cater to the needs of "penitent gluttons" are, says the journal, visited by numbers, annually increasing, who go there in spring and summer to make amends for overeating and overdrinking in winter. "It would be a genuine public service on the part of leading society personages if they would begin by practical example to wage war on the sensual luxuriosness of modern entertaining, as far as the culinary end of it is concerned. Only by a return to simple and sensible dinners can we avert genuine economic and physical perils."

Streets of New York.

"Anything in the line of luck can happen in New York city," observed a commercial traveler recently, "and some of the funniest stunts are accidentally pulled off. I saw something the other day quicker done than told. An automobile was going down Broad way. A woman dropped a magazine or book from it. A man picked it up—a man worse for poverty. As the chauffeur turned the vehicle this man threw the magazine or book into it, and the woman tossed a coin at him. Another man, running down Broad way, caught the coin and continued running. The man who had not his tip started to laugh, and soon Broad way was laughing with him, although not knowing what it was laughing at."—New York Tribune.

Flat Woes.

"Was there a telephone call for me this morning?" I asked the West Indian bellboy. "No, sir," he answered positively. "Dey ain't been no such call fuh you fuh two days, sah." "Are you sure?" "Yes, sah, positive." "Well, if one comes for me this afternoon say I'll be in later." "Yes, sah—what's yonah name, sah?"—Toledo Blade.

Slim Chance.

"Is there any chance of a young man escaping loss the first time he goes into Wall street?" "Well, it is a toss up if he escapes the bulls and a tight squeeze if he gets away from the bears."—Baltimore American.

So She Does.

"Dog watches are common on ships, but what can a cat do?" "She comes in handy for a pur, str."—Baltimore American.

LENTS A. & W. TEAM WINS ANOTHER GAME

The Lents team of the A. & W. League won another shut-out game Sunday when they sent the Marshall-Wells team back to Portland with the small end of an 8 to 0 score.

By mutual agreement the game was called at the end of fifth in order to allow the game between the Lents Giants and the Brooklyn Grays, but the five innings clearly demonstrated the superiority of the locals, who outclassed their opponents in every department of the game.

The battery work of the Boland brothers was superb, and the M. W. boys secured one dinky scratch hit. Both the infield and outfield rendered hangup good support and played with a vim that would make some of the semi-pro. teams get up and dust.

This was the second game of the season, and already Lents has two short-outs to her credit. Space forbids going into details this week. Next Sunday they cross bats with Brooklyn.

TUNNELS UNDER RIVERS.

They Are Built on a Plan Taught to Man by a Worm.

There are now many great rivers with tunnels under them. Even when one is sunk to such a depth and carried so far along as the one under the Hudson at Storm King for the aqueduct it excites only a moment's wonder.

Such tunnels are generally driven under the water on the same plan, and that plan was taught to an engineer by a worm. The first attempt to make a tunnel under a river of any size was the Thames tunnel in London, which was built by the famous engineer Brunel. He had so much trouble with the water that oozed through that he came near giving up the job as impossible when he happened to see a piece of rotten wood into which a worm had bored under water.

As the worm ate its way into the wood it left a deposit like lime all around the hole, and this got quite hard and waterproof, so that the worm could always get out the way it came, and the hole remained true and firm.

Brunel did the same thing. He made large steel tubes and pushed them into the earth, and then he forced cement in between the tube and the wet ground about it, so that it set as hard as a rock. All tunnels under water are built on the same plan now.—New York Sun.

London as a Frenchman Sees It.

The little French boy has every opportunity of getting an engaging idea of London. In a recent volume of French and general geography, which has run into several editions, the compiler gives an English reading from the works of M. Enault, whoever he may be. And the little French boy is told concerning the London of this century that there are in the best parts of our unhappy city "whole streets formed of dens dug out of the soil, which itself was only a mass of rubbish." And again, "A little further on bands of half starved men without fire or shelter take refuge in gypsy vans, which vans are buried up to the axletrees in mud." People also sleep in wheelless cabs, for which they pay a rent of 12½ cents a week. We Londoners should not have known anything about this if M. Enault had not told us.—London Chronicle.

The Wayside Economist.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said the brisk woman. "You go out and pick me two or three quartons of blueberries and I'll put some of them into a pie and bake it for you." "Lady," replied Plodding Pete. "I'm afraid you don't read de paper. In dese days de producer of raw material an' de ultimate consumer is kickin' so hard dat I couldn't consider a transaction where I'd be both of 'em at once."—Washington Star.
