Time Is Sometimes Kind.
Father Time is not always a hard parent, and, though he carries for none of his children, often lays his hand lightly upon those who have used him well, making them old men and women inexorably enough, but leaving their hearts and spirits young and in full vigor. With such people the gray head is but the impression of the old fellow's hand in giving them his blessing, and every wrinkle but a notch in the quiet calendar of a well-spent life.

Sound Education in Finland.
In the rudiments of a sound education the Finnish people are unsurpassed. Practically every man and woman in the country has a working knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic, and every child of school age receives careful instruction in these studies. Every adult has a vote, and although 53 per cent of the inhabitants are women, there are only seventeen of their sex in the Finnish diet.

Lucifer Matches Date From 1834.
Lucifer matches—that is, matches tipped with an explosive substance that bursts into flame on being struck—were first used about 1834. Many improvements have been made in matches since then, the most important of which was the invention of the safety match, striking on the box only.

Banish All Skin Troubles
Remarkable Remedy That Works Wonders Against Eczema and All Rash

If you have been fighting some blood trouble, some skin disease, call it eczema, lupus, psoriasis, malaria, or what you will, there is but one sure, safe way to get rid of it. Ask at any drug store for a $1.00 bottle of S. S. S. and you are then on the road to health. The action of this remarkable remedy is just as direct, just as positive, just as certain in its influence as that the sun rises in the East. It is one of those rare medicinal forces which act in the blood with the same degree of certainty that is found in all natural tendencies. The manner in which it dominates and controls the mysterious transference of rich, red, pure arterial blood for the diseased venous blood is marvellous.

Out through every skin pore acids, germs and other blood impurities are forced in the form of invisible vapor. Beneath the skin is a fine network of nerves, a myriad of them in which S. S. S. works with untiring energy to prevent the further destructive work of the acids and blood impurities. These are scattered into the veins to be driven from the system. The lungs breathe it out, the liver is stimulated to consume a great proportion of impurities, the stomach and intestines cease to convey into the blood stream the catarrhal, malarial germs; the bowels, kidneys, bladder and all excretories of the body are marshaled into a fighting force to expel every vestige of eruptive disease.

There is scarcely a community anywhere but what has its living example of the wonderful curative effects of S. S. S. Get a bottle of this famous remedy to-day, and if your case is stubborn or peculiar, write to The Swift Specific Co., 149 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Their medical laboratory is famous and is conducted by renowned experts in blood and skin disease.

IMAGINATION IS GREAT THING

Doctor Who Had Been Attending Old Woman Overlooked Most Important Part of Treatment.

Dr. Edward Sanger, who has abandoned his post as assistant to a celebrated Chicago specialist because he dislikes the latter's methods, said in New York:

"We should not announce cures unless they are real cures. Imagination plays too great a part in a patient's feelings.

"Imagination must always be reckoned with in medicine—sometimes as a friend, sometimes as a foe. I know a doctor who treated an old woman for typhoid, and on each visit he took her temperature by holding a thermometer under her tongue. One day, when she had nearly recovered, the doctor did not bother to take her temperature, and he had hardly got 100 yards from the house when her son called him back.

"'Mother is worse,' said the man. 'Come back at once.'

"The doctor returned. On his entry into the sick room the old woman looked up at him with angry and reproachful eyes.

"'Doctor,' she said, 'why didn't you give me the jigger under my tongue today? That always done me more good than all the rest of your trash.'"

"If that's the cause of their disagreement, they ought to be given a divorce for the sake of their neighbors."

Lawyer's Choice.
A judge and joking lawyer were conversing about the doctrine of transmigration of the souls of men into animals. "Now," said the judge, "suppose you and I were turned into a horse and an ass, which would you prefer to be?"
"The ass, to be sure," replied the lawyer.

"Why?" asked the judge.
"Because I have heard of an ass being a judge, but a horse, never."

INSPIRED BY CHARGER
RIDERLESS HORSE SHAMED THE RETREATING SOLDIERS.

Faithful White Stallion, After the Colonel Had Fallen, Went On, as He Would Have, to Victory or Death.

Three hundred yards from the spitting trenches a nickel jacketed bullet caught the colonel squarely in the forehead, and he lurched from the saddle. A hoarse cry went up from the thundering regiment, and the white horse plunged wildly, one of his rider's feet still in the stirrup. The trenches broke into yells and their fire swelled louder. The cuirassiers slowed; their long lines wavered, hesitated, and broke.

From the other side of the river, the infantry, struggling vainly under the pitiless mauling of the enemy's fire, saw the charge through the smoke of the guns—saw the colonel's fall, and groaned when the splendid squadrons broke. The sweat, pouring down the general's face, felt cold as he wiped it away with a hand that trembled.

"They're gone!" he muttered brokenly. "And he's gone with them!" he added; for he had known the big blond colonel, and loved him as the men did.

Stung by the fire which pelted their backs as unrelentingly as it had their faces, the broken masses of the cavalry rolled back over the ground already heaped with their dead. Suddenly, from the scattered fringe of horsemen cloaking the rear of the fleeing cloud, broke the big white stallion, the heavy empty saddle showing pitifully against his white flank. An instant he stood, trembling; then his head went up, his mane shook out, and he started back toward the hostile trenches.

Across the river, the infantry gasped; the gunners stuck their heads from gullies and cheered; the bleeding, cowering infantry wiped their rifles. Something seemed to catch in the general's throat, and something streamed down his cheek that was not sweat.

The white horse had gone twenty yards when a cuirassier officer flung his long blade high in the air. The wavering columns slowed, jolting up and down like rocking horses as the men sawed on the bits. Above the din of the firing sounded the cracked blowing of the cavalry trumpets. A single shining figure turned and sped after the empty saddle, a little group followed, a line veered round clumsily and started back, then the whole lurching mass pulled about and went back through the heaped-up bodies on the ground, the white horse with the empty saddle galloping steadily before them.

A hoarse yell went up from every heavy-eyed, broken-spirited infantryman in the long lines. The two pummeled columns broke into little dribbles of men, who ran down to the shore, plunged into the current and started splashing for the opposite bank without an apparent thought of the hail of metal slashing through them. The gunners jumped from their shelter and jammed the shells into the cold breeches of the guns. The supporting column awoke, and its front was suddenly lighted by a thousand flashes of fire.—Donal Hamilton in McClure's Magazine.

Royal Crest Counts for Something.
Some Irishmen are nothing if not ingenious. Here is a good story told of one, a terrible scamp serving in South Africa under Colonel Hamilton-Brown. On discharge he asked for a character, and was given one by the colonel so bad as should ordinarily have barred him from employment forever.

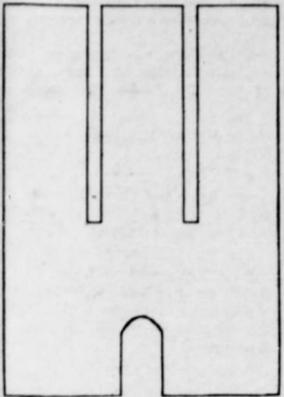

Some time later the colonel met him, a most prosperous man and about to embark for the mother country.

"But," said the colonel, "how was it that people, reading such a character as I gave you, should have been so taken in?"
"Read it," the scamp replied. "Never a one of them read it, and for a very good reason, as not one of them could read a word of English. It was the lion and the unicorn fighting for the crown on the top of the official paper that did the trick, and that's what I wanted when I troubled you for a character. So long, colonel; there's the 'all for the shore' bell ringing. Good luck, and many thanks, as it's through you I'm in for a high old time."

Capture Underground Water.
An ingenious method has been employed by a Wyoming live stock company in bringing to the surface and thus making available for use, the water and underground streams, of which there are many on the slopes of the Rockies. These streams percolate through beds of sand and gravel at depths varying from 10 to 15 feet below the surface, but are prevented from sinking deeper by underlying strata of impervious clay. In building the irrigation system a row of steel sheet piling extending across the arroyo, or dry river bed, was first driven through the sand and gravel, penetrating the clay bed to a sufficient depth to prevent seepage. The spillway portions of the sheet piling were then incased in concrete, forming a continuous concrete dam. Since there was no underground escape for the water, a reservoir was quickly formed, providing a permanent source of supply for the irrigation system, by which many acres are being reclaimed.—Popular Mechanics.

KEEPS SPOON FROM SLIPPING
Simple Device That May Be Made at Home Will Prove of Great Value to the Cook.

When cooking in a stewpan or basin the spoon, unless a large one, has generally got to be taken out and laid aside or else run the risk of its slipping down into the contents every time it is used. To obviate this, the simple device pictured herewith should be used. Consisting merely of a piece of tin, procurable at the tin shop or cut from a clean tin can, it wants to be three and one-half inches long by two and one-half inches wide. Up from the lower edge, at a distance of three-fourths of an inch from the sides, two strips, each one-eighth of an inch wide and two inches long, are cut out; this leaves the three pieces now parallel with one another of the same width. These now want to be bent so as to form a clamp that will slip over the rim of the stewpan and hold. Then, by cutting out the small rounded portion near the top, the handle of the spoon can be dropped into this and so prevented slipping into the bottom of the pan.

QUITE EASY TO MEND CHINA
If Damaged Article is of Value, Here Are Some Ways by Which It May Be Made Good.

The breaking of china is an everyday happening in some households, and unless the article broken is an ornament of some value no trouble is taken to mend it. Many dishes, however, may be quite well mended at home, and a very efficient cement can be made by mixing together into a paste equal quantities of whey of milk and vinegar, powdered quicklime and the white of an egg. The mixture must be well beaten and warmed. Expose the broken edges of the china to heat before applying the cement. A very thin coating is sufficient, and the joint should be held firmly in place until the cement has dried.

If the dish is only cracked it may be prevented from falling to pieces by painting the crack on the underside with white paint. Cut a piece of tape the length of the crack over one side with white paint and lay it over the crack. Press the tape down till perfectly smooth. Set the dish aside for two or three weeks, when the crack will be perfectly firm.

Broken china may also be mended with a paste made of plaster of paris and glue. Use the ordinary bottle of glue mixing one part of the glue with two of water and adding the plaster of paris to it.

Ornaments that have come to pieces may also be mended with white paint, using the ordinary tubes required for oil painting. Very little is required, and after applying it to the broken edges they should be closely held together for a little, then left for a few hours to dry.

Small Almond Cakes.
One pound powdered sugar, six eggs, beaten very light; one-half pound almonds, blanched and powdered; one-half pound prepared flour. Rosewater, mixed with the almond paste; whip up the whites of the eggs to a meringue with half the sugar; stir in the almond paste. Beat the yolks ten minutes with the remainder of the sugar. Mix all together; add the flour lightly and rapidly. Bake in well-buttered patty tins, or other small tins, very quickly. Turn out as soon as done upon a baking pan, bottom uppermost, that these may dry out. According to the size of the small tins, the number of cakes.

Sponge Pudding.
One pint milk, one-quarter cup flour, one-half cup sugar, five eggs (yolks beaten separately), whites of eggs beaten stiff, one-quarter cup butter. Scald milk, add sugar and flour. Cook till it thickens, then add butter and yolks of eggs. Lastly add whites of eggs. Butter pudding dish, fill with mixture, set in pan of hot water and bake from twenty minutes to half an hour.

New Kind of Work.
Cynthia, a young negro cook, who had recently given up her employment in order that she might try her luck at the easier profession of cateress, met her former mistress on the street. (This is from Life). "Good morning, Cynthia," said the lady. "Where are you working now?" "I isn't workin' nowhere now, ma'am," replied Cynthia coyly; "I 'se capering for a congressman."

Chicken Race War.

"A sectional issue has arisen in our town," said the commuter. "Before it is settled I am afraid the civil war will be fought all over again. Anyhow, our Southern friends are sure to indulge in some fire-eating language. 'A resident of our village, who undertook to raise chickens, received a crate of fowls from a South Carolina farm. When the neighbors learned where the chickens came from they raised a row.

"If you must get chickens," they said, 'get Northern chickens. They don't crow nearly so much as Southern chickens. There is something in the climate down there that makes a chicken crow four times as often as a chicken brought up in any other part of the country.'

"That peculiarity of Southern chickens was news to the amateur poultryman. He noticed, however, that his chickens really did crow more persistently and more vigorously than any other chickens he ever had known, and when an experienced poulterer assured him that they always would, because Southern chickens always do, he sold them and bought New Jersey chickens instead. Now he is in hot water with the Southern families in our town, and heaven only knows how the squabble will terminate." — New York Times.

Rule for Candles.

An old rule calls for as many candles on the table as there are guests about it, and it is a rule that might be followed with interesting results. There is so much variety shown nowadays in the way in which caudles are placed on a table that the candles could be put one in front of each guest, in a circle or oval or oblong about the floral centerpiece.

For the Congregation.

One Sunday a diminutive preacher exchanged pulpits with a pastor who was a giant in stature. The pulpit was unusually high and was reached by a winding stairway. He ascended very slowly and for some time disappeared from sight. At length the congregation saw a little bald head raised above the pulpit, so that only the eyes were visible, while the preacher announced his text in a high, squeaking voice: "It is I; be not afraid."

Though we get our games of tennis from the Eastern countries, most of our games of bat and ball come down to us from the ancient North.
