Double Floors in Streetcars.
The new streetcars for Ottawa, the capital of Canada, have floors of double thickness, with tarred paper between. This makes the cars much warmer than does the old-style single floor and also muffles the noise of the motors and running gear underneath. —Pittsburg Dispatch.

VACATIONS ARE TOO BRIEF

Real Trouble Is Not Season of Year in Which They Are Taken But Their Length.

"About this time," an almanachist might remark, "look out for letters in the papers vaunting the superiority of autumnal vacations to those taken during the heats of summer." Whether he remarked it, or not, the onlooker would always find them, and, if a thoughtful person with much knowledge of human nature, he might proceed to propound the theory, or hypothesis that every such letter is written by somebody who, his vacation being past, wishes it wasn't.

Hence come, or at least very probably may come, these fervid eulogies of fall as the year's pleasant season—the season when, much more than in summer, life in the open has its rewards and joys. Of course, the eulogies of autumn are all true enough, but just the same, when next summer arrives everybody who can, will quit the city for the sake of avoiding work when it seems hardest to do.

We think more of present woes than of future pleasures, and while we all know that the country is at its finest in autumn, we also all know that the city isn't bad then, either, while it is very distinctly so in summer.

The real trouble with vacations is their brevity. Six months, or nine, would be about the right length. Still better, perhaps, would be a vacation from idleness of two weeks in the year devoted to toil, done just to make the other fifty appreciable by contrast. Probably most of us would love our work if it didn't take more of our time than that.

Goldschmidt Wireless.
According to a writer in the engineering supplement of the London Times, the Goldschmidt high frequency generator has brought long-distance wireless telephony measurably nearer. With this generator it is a comparatively simple matter to control the oscillations by a microphone. The method is described as depending on the simultaneous use of two generators "running slightly out of step, or asynchronously, the microphone currents affecting the field excitation of one of them. Any slight boosting up of this field is just sufficient to bring the two into step, with the result that an instantaneous and large rise of current is generated for charging the aerial." It is also added that preparations are nearing completion for a demonstration of "automatic telegraph over a distance of some 4,000 miles between Hanover and Tuckerton."

The Rainbow.
We habitually think of the rain cloud only as dark and gray; not knowing that we owe to it perhaps the fairest, though not the most dazzling, of the hues of heaven. Often in our English mornings the rain clouds in the dawn form soft, level fields, which melt imperceptibly into the blue; or, when of less extent, gather into apparent bars, crossing the sheets of broader clouds above; and all these bathed throughout in an unspeakable light of pure rose color, and purple, and amber, and blue; not shining, but misty soft; the barred masses when seen nearer, composed of clusters or tresses of cloud, like floss silk, looking as if each knot were a little swath or sheaf of lighted rain.—John Ruskin.

Most Expensive Advertising.
Few persons appreciate the enormous cost of advertising a popular product before it obtains popularity. One of the most successful advertisers in the country, whose income reaches hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, told Leslie's Weekly that he wasted at least a quarter of a million dollars "before he learned the advertising game." He estimates that he spent this amount on circulars, gaudy lithographs, sign boards and street car advertising, out of which he received so little benefit, as far as he could trace it, that he regarded the expenditure as money pretty nearly wasted.

World's Richest Iron Mine.
The richest and probably the largest iron-ore mine in the world is located at Kiruna, Lapland, in latitude 68½ north, which is about the same as the northernmost boundary of Alaska. The climate is somewhat milder than in Alaska, and these mines are worked the year around.

About 1,600 men are employed, and the equipment is all of the most modern machinery obtainable. Machine tools for the repair shop, air compressors, and rock drills, and several of the largest steam and electric shovels are of American make.

For Safety at Sea.
Of all the suggestions made for the elimination of the dangers of the Scientific American says the most notable and most obvious one is that of the English committee on boats and davits that the size of lifeboats shall be very greatly increased. The committee proposes a type that shall provide accommodation for no less than 250 passengers. They will be decked over throughout the greater part of their length, and they will be driven by gasoline engines of sufficient power to give them a fair speed.

Wide Circle.
"What progress is the plumber making in locating the leak in our gas pipe?"
"Well, he's covering a good deal of ground," said the housewife. "He has inspected the adjacent poolroom thoroughly and now he is looking over the saloon next door."

WIFE IS PARENTHESIS

AVERAGE AMERICAN LOOKS DOWN ON SPOUSE.

Slaves for Her, According to Old Tradition, but Does Not Realize Her Possibilities, Says Writer.

"What do you call the weak point?" Bowen paused. "The fact that the average American looks down on his wife."

Mrs. Fairford was up with a spring. "Really, Charles—if that's where paradox lands you."

Bowen mildly stood his ground. "Well—doesn't he prove it? How much does he let her share the real business of life? How much does he rely on her judgment and help in the conduct of serious affairs? Take Ralph, for instance—you say his wife's extravagance forces him to work too hard; but that's not what's wrong. It's normal for a man to work hard for a woman—what's abnormal is his not caring to tell her anything about it."

"To tell Undine? She'd be bored to death if he did!"

"Just so; she even felt aggrieved. But why? Because it's against the custom of the country. And whose fault is that? The man's again—I don't mean Ralph, I mean the genus he belongs to; homo sapiens, Americanus. Why haven't we taught our women to take an interest in our work? Simply because we don't take enough interest in them."

Mrs. Fairford, shaking back in her chair, sat gazing at the vertiginous depths above which his thoughts seemed to dangle her.

"You don't—I mean the American man doesn't—the most slavish, self-effacing, self-sacrificing—"

"Yes; and the most indifferent; there's the point. The 'slavish' no argument against the indifference. To slave for a woman is part of the old American tradition; lots of people give their lives for dogs as they've ceased to believe in. Then again, in this country the passion for making money has preceded the knowing how to spend it, and the American man lavishes his fortune on his wife because he doesn't know what else to do with it."

"Then you call it a mere want of imagination for a man to lavish his money on his wife?"

"Not necessarily—but it's a want of imagination to fancy it's all he owes her. Why does the European woman interest herself so much more in what the men are doing? Because she's so important to them that they make it worth her while! She's not a parenthesis, as she is here—they simply don't picture life without her."—Edith Wheaton, in Scribner's Magazine.

Ancient "Rules of Civility."

If the seventh-century Englishman failed in his manners it was for want of instruction. "The Rules of Civility," a book published in 1675, contains the following hints on good behavior: "Being in discourse with a man, 'tis no less than ridiculous to pull him by the buttons, to play with the bandstrings, belt or cloak; or to punch him now and then on the stomach; 'tis a pleasant sight, and well worthy of laughter, to see him that is so punctured, fall back and retire; whilst the other, insensible of his absurdity, pursues and presses him into some corner, where he is at last glad to cry quarter, before his comrade perceives he is in danger." And again: "It argues neglect, and to undervalue a man, to sleep when he is discoursing or reading; therefore, good manners command it to be forbid; besides, something there may happen in the act that may offend, as snoring, sweating, gaping or dribbling."

Government-Owned Smoke.

Citizens of these United States who yell for government ownership of every industry that displeases them ought to live in France a while in order to get acquainted with a horrible example of what political paternalism really means. In the French republic the government controls the sale of tobacco, which is famous for its infamous quality. Instead of improving the cigarettes and cigars sold, the authorities occasionally soothe consumers by inclosing various presents in the packages of smokables. This is sometimes adding insult to injury, however, for the tobacco is sold according to weight. Recently, when a certain brand of cigarettes was accompanied by a heavy shoe buckle the worm turned and kicked. At the "Direction des Tabacs," however, the officials have all the hauteur of the American political appointee, and the kicker was asked coldly if he expected a pair of shoes for ten cents.—Wall Street Journal.

What Is Migraine?

Many of the old authorities consider migraine as a kind of "brain storm" without the loss of responsibility. It is a near relative to epilepsy, though fortunately not so hopeless. At a recent meeting of the Physicians' club of Hamburg Dr. Auerbach announced that after prolonged study he had come to regard migraine as a general symptom due to the fact that the cerebrum on a given side was too large for the cranium. If this be the real basis of the trouble, then any nervous disturbance will bring on the crisis in the brain.

The truth of the idea has not yet been demonstrated, but as migraine is so common many physicians may be able to test the idea. In the course of the discussion many suggestions were made.

A Real Wonder Comes to Town.
Marjorie came running into the house with a "measuring worm" on a leaf.

"Look what I found on the pear tree," she said to her mother. The mother looked and smiled. "It's just a little worm," she said. "But wait a minute," the youngster insisted, "and you'll see him take a tuck in himself."—Youngstown, O., Telegram.
