LIVESTOCK SHOW TO BE OF UNUSUAL SCOPE

From all over the west, and from some of the middle western States, come reports of intending exhibitors at the International Livestock Exposition to be held at the Portland Union Stockyards, December 8-13. Guernseys from Wisconsin, Holsteins from Arizona, Herefords and Shorthorns from Montana will be seen on dress parade by the side of fancy livestock from the agricultural colleges of California, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. Stump's herd of Jerseys from Monmouth, Oregon, from which the grand champion heifer for the United States at the national show in Chicago was taken, will be entered, and the Brown, Minor and Dunn Shorthorns are also on this circuit. Many entries of sheep from the most prominent flocks of the Northwest will also be shown.

The exposition officials have been fortunate in securing the services of some of the most famous livestock judges in the union to take care of the classes. Practically all the men selected have been judges at the International Livestock Exposition or the National Dairy Show at Chicago and all are noted for exceptional ability and fairness.

Commercial and booster clubs all over the northwest are enthusiastically stirring up interest in the event, full special car parties are promised from a number of the cities of eastern and central Oregon and it is expected that many people all over the country will take advantage of the reduced railroad rates.
