

LEADERETTES.

This is the monumental age. Strange as it may seem, Senator Logan is not satisfied with the Cleveland administration.

The Medical Lake banner is dead. Not even the medicinal virtues of Medical Lake salts could save it.

The Democratic conventions of Mississippi, Iowa and Ohio have endorsed Cleveland's administration in no uncertain terms.

The Scout says that "a coal oil spring, with a steady stream about one inch in size," has been discovered in Union county.

The Oregonian quotes approvingly from the Corvallis Gazette the following: "The Hon. Geo. H. Wilkes is new and has been for some time the choice of 90 Republicans out of every 100 for United States Senator." Bah!

Hoadley and Foraker are again the opposing gubernatorial candidates in Ohio. If Foraker wins, it will be a big rebuke to the administration; but if Hoadley (Dem) wins in Republican Ohio, the fact will have no political significance whatever, according to the Blaine organ.

Mr. Cleveland's idea of a compromise, the cattlemen are beginning to find out, resembles the indifference of Dean Richmond, who said his subordinate of esthetic and independent tastes in the matter of operation: "I don't care a darn what color you paint your old car, so long as you paint her red."

When Bourbon editors become indignant at the idea of such a man as Stanley Matthews occupying a seat on the Supreme bench and feel like contorting his judicial decisions into political capital, they should remember that it was by the vote of Bourbon Democratic Senators that Stanley Matthews was confirmed in his position.

This much cannot be honestly denied: the administration in at least some appointments has followed the letter and spirit of the strictest service reform. These are the very instances that have given the Blaine organs and Bourbon organs the greatest offense. The latter desire the continuance of the spoils system for present profit and former desire the same for prospective profit.

The Secretary of State will have the sympathy of all Americans, and especially of all who have traveled across, in his efforts to improve the tone of our consular service. But the radical evil can only be remedied by Congress. At present, officers in that branch of our service are already small. The consequence is that the occupants fall into three classes. First, the incompetents, who are glad to take and do nothing; second, rich people, who are conscious of social distinction, and are willing to take place for wealth; and third, a few who are able to do their duty, but who are not recognized as such. It is in such a situation that a particular class of men benefit them, and who are in order to have a livable and easy occupation in their old age. Out of these three classes our foreign consular service is mostly recruited, and we are apt to be better off than in any other branch of our service, where a better policy would be better to abolish the system entirely.

The rapidly with which Assistant Secretary General Stevenson is being replaced by a republican postmaster, and the vacancies with demerits, are causing some anxiety among the magwumps. These officials are covered by the civil service law, and it has been announced that the administration will not extend the scope of the rules at all. Theorists who go to extremes and denounce a policy that looks like compromising with "spoils," but great reforms move slowly, and they can only move at all when sustained by public sentiment. If it appears that the classical civil service has survived a change of party and is established on a basis that lifts it above the fluctuations of politics, that will be a tremendous stride forward. It was not that, after the post offices have been divided with some fairness between the parties, the department will adopt a more conservative policy. But reasonable men will not criticize the administration for seeking to establish something like an equilibrium in this matter.

Quite recently a certain Chinaman in St. Louis, suddenly removed to another world by the murderous assault of highlanders, was buried with both Christian and Confucian ceremonies, and now the same double duty has been done for Ah Mon, the murdered Chinaman, in this city. This queer combination of the ceremonies of Christianity and what Christianity calls paganism, suggests the not unreasonable inquiry if the alleged "converted" Celestials really understand if they are converted, and to and from what they are converted? The religion handed down by Confucius antedates Christianity by a little more than five centuries, and so ancient authority as the Protestant missionary, Dr. Samuel Wells Williams, declared it to be generally unexceptional in its moral teaching and tendency. It is quite possible that the Chinamen who accept Christian conversion do so with a reserve in favor of their own religion—cast an anchor to the windward, so to speak—and when they come to die desire to go to the grave with a full parade of the burnt joss sticks, baked meats, cards and other Chinese ceremonial customs, as well as the prayers and hymns of their new-found Sunday-school teachers and friends.—New York World.

The Federal Tax He Wanted for a Starter.

Old man Buntin had not been especially blessed in his possession of a wife, and was rather walked over by Mrs. B., but finally she died and the old man had the preacher come and see him.

"Good morning, Brother Buntin," he said; "this is a solemn time."

"Yes, rather, for the old woman."

"And for you as well, Brother Buntin, for she was an active Christian and did much good."

"So I've heard, so I've heard, Mr. Good."

"I presume, Brother Buntin, you will want me to preach the funeral to-day?"

"West ez soon ez you please, Mr. Good."

"Are there any directions you would like to give?"

"Kin I hev it done son'at ez I want it?"

"Oh, yes, of course."

"Then I won't teach the sermon, fur you hev to build that the best you kin, but I'd like to fix the singin' a little. Kin I do that?"

"Yes; what do you want to have done?"

"Well, want a chune kinder settin' off my feelin' like, an' I reckon ez how the choir might sing. 'Arise my soul, shake off your fears,' fur a starter, and let 'em give 'This is the way I long have sought' fur a winder. I reckon thet's all the dreckshuns I've got, and them'll kiver the case ez fur ez I'm concerned."

Silent Men.

Washington never made a speech. In the zenith of his fame he once attempted it, failed, and gave up confused and abashed. In framing the Constitution of the United States, the labor was almost wholly performed in committee of the whole, of which George Washington was chairman; he made two speeches during the convention, however, and was its acknowledged master spirit, and historical affirm that had not been for his personal popularity and thirty words of his first speech, pronouncing it the best that could be united upon, the Constitution would have been rejected by the people. Thus Jefferson never made a speech. He couldn't do it. Napoleon, whose executive ability is almost without a parallel, said that the greatest difficulty was finding men of deeds rather than words. When asked how he maintained his success in age and experience when Commander-in-chief of the army in Italy, he said by reserve. The greatest of men is not measured by the length of his speeches and their number.

Which They Would Rather be.

"There were two little girls named Ruth and Jennie," said Deacon Buegry, addressing the Sunday school (the deacon isn't much of a talker), "and one day their Uncle James gave them a shilling piece. Ruth put her shilling in the missionary box for the poor little heathen children who haven't any kind fathers and mothers to buy them clothes and pryer-brothers and things; but Jennie ran right down street and spent her shilling for French candy and nuts and apples and oranges and dolls and jerseys and tailor-made suits and er-everything you can think of, and never gave any of it to the poor little heathens, whom we all feel so sorry for. Now, dear children," concluded the deacon, impressively, "which would you rather be, Ruth, who gave all her money to the heathens, or Jennie, who spends every cent upon herself?"

And the scholars all shouted: "Jennie!"

He Thought He was the Man to Do It.

"I think, my dear," said Mrs. Shuttle, as she stitched one more block into the crazy quilt, "that you had better send up a man to 'rorrow."

"Send up a man?" said Job, surprised. "Well, what for, I should like to know? If there is anything to be done by a man around here I guess I'm the man to do it."

"Very well. Then we shall save a dollar and a half. I was thinking of taking up the parlor carpet and getting a man to beat it."

"Well," said Job, that beats me, I will send up the man."

A scarcity of pennies in the West goes to show that the business men of New York are really in earnest and intend building a monument to Gen. Grant.

PYEMIA
Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but less certainly so, is the violation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Itimply, Ities, Itolls, and Cutaneous Itruptions. When the tint of Sarsaparilla gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SANSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA
Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SANSAPARILLA. Its distinctive symptom is Weakness. It cleans the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of
