Guild Gives Farewell Party.

Members of All Saints' Guild and their husbands spent a most delightful Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Price—the occasion being a farewell party to the guests of honor, Miss Emma Johnson, Miss Von Wintzingerode, Mr. and Mrs. G. Salting.

Progressive euchre was the amusement feature of the evening, Dr. Smith winning the consolation prize. The musical numbers consisted of selections by a mixed quartet and a solo by Mr. R. G. Salting, while Mrs. Salting entertained as usual with her charming voice.

The decorations consisted of cut flowers. Elaborate refreshments were served by the hostess, during which time the guests were entertained with music from Mrs. Price's new Apollo. Those present were: Miss Emma Johnson, Miss Von Wintzingerode, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Geiss, Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Maybree, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Proebstel, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Salting, Mr. and Mrs. Carl McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. A. James, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Price, Mrs. Lillian Fredericks, Mrs. Banister.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Representative Frederick Beyer of Philadelphia has prepared a series of bills in which he will propose that special elections be held every three years in each county to determine whether the exhibition of moving pictures, manufacture and sale of tobacco, licensing of public garages, selling of liquors in chartered clubs, the manufacture and sale of chewing gum, the sale of coffee and tea and the eating of pork or meat Fridays would be permitted.

Next Sunday's Games

Weston at Milton-Freewater.

Athena at Helix.

It is never wise to expect to lose a ball game since in just about 99 out of 100 instances the expectation will then be realized.

Yet it is far better to expect to lose a ball game and win it, than to expect to win it and lose it. Fans and players alike feel infinitely happier and the horizon takes on a rosy glow.

After which bit of wisdom we will proceed to relate that last Sunday Weston expected to lose a game which it won and Athena expected to win a game which it lost. Figure now for yourselves the burg in which the Jays are riotously rampant, and the one in which the Glooms hold fearful sway.

Before you guess take one good look at Altitudinous Al NordDean, the Athena first sacker. It might help.

If we could tell about the game in three lines, we would say that Swede Blomgren saved it and that Farmer O'Harra won it for Weston.

That's just about all in a nutshell. Anything further will be elaboration. Nevertheless, we will elaborate for a few rods and furlongs.

"The Swede" grew and blossomed, we presume, in the baseball bushes of Scandinavia, if such there be. Otherwise we must be adopted and good looking product of the American bushes. Leastwise he has played around Weston for quite a spell, and invariably in the inner garden. Let this suffice for biography.

Long "Boone" Barnes, Weston's center fielder and outfield captain, has had his eye on the Swede, and has long wanted to transplant him to the outer garden and to boss him and cultivate him. Sunday before last Barnes had his wish and Blomgren took four chances in left field without a skip.

Last Sunday at Athena he took five chances—generally at critical moments with men on bases—and two of them were brilliant, spectacular, thrilling catches. He was crippled from losing a few acres of cuticle in sliding to bases, but nevertheless robbed an Athena batsman out of a Texas leaguer after a wonderful run. On another occasion he pulled down the ball with one hand when it all but overshot him, turned over backward through the force of his momentum and afterward bobbed up serenely with the sphere in his hand. Friends and foe alike gave tongue to vociferous cheers.

Farmer O'Harra was in nailing good form and outpitched Rusty Shick, but nevertheless owed much to the fielding activities of his team mates.

The Farmer won his own game in the ninth, when at Athena he had singled and Wheeler had doubled he scored them both with a timely drive for two bases. Blomgren sacrificed him home.

"State" Wheeler's stunt in the fifth was an amusing feature. He hit into the eye grass jungles just beyond the first station and ambled to third while the Athenians were searching for the ball. A wild heave to third enabled him to complete the circuit with the first tally of the game.

Athena's two scores came in the sixth, and were largely due to singles by E. Williams and DePeatt and a two-bagger by Franz.

The bitter melancholy that has tinged the recent narratives of Scorer Barnes gives place this week, we are glad to see, to a note of profound joy. Read and rejoice:

The Story of Makepeace Jones

AT BIRTH, he was proclaimed a "Future Great." He grew up a model young man.

To his parents' entreaties that he stay in the home town and become famed, Makepeace turned a deaf ear. It offered no opportunity of advancement. It was prohibition ridden—its inadequate taxes permitted of no improvements, no expansion. Business was stagnant, the town was no-license—dead. Makepeace made the mistake of quitting one "dry" town for another.

He had no appetite for strong stimulants, but he chafed under a law that denied his right to drink healthful, nutritious beer, even temperately. His rights as a freeman citizen could not be challenged by such shallow laws.

His disregard of prohibitory law became habitual and he frequented blind pigs—at first, his independent indignation—later, because he wanted to. His appetite for strong stimulants developed. Makepeace Jones, the "Future Great," became a drunkard.

Had he been privileged to enter licensed saloons—he would have entered them only occasionally. Brain-and-body sag demanded a mild stimulant—a once-in-awhile glass of good, refreshing beer. Denied the desired beverage, the drink of True Temperance, Makepeace Jones became a social outcast.
