the German troops. This was in flagrant violation of international law, and brought the heaviest penalties on the Belgian land and people.

The recent gathering of osteopaths at Portland inspired such bony verification on the part of Dean Collins, Oregonian rhymester, as would bring tears of pain to the stony eyes of an ossified man. The subjoined and annexed will serve sufficiently as a sad-sending sample:

Believe me, if all those attractive young bones That they showed as they lectured Are true, then I clamor, in solemnest tones, I'm bonier far than I thought.

And I looked at them there and I really declare, If those bones so artistically dried, Are just the same style as the bones that I wear— I'm glad that I wear mine inside.

Which reminds us that the osteopaths, although they did not affiliate with any other tribe of healers, held what could be not inaptly described as a joint session.

A Portland firm advertises funerals at $75 each, indicating that it is a real economical place in which to die.

Henry Clews of Wall Street has devised a beautiful peace plan, and the trifling formality only remains of its adoption by the warring nations.

LOS ANGELES "SANTA" IS A WESTON VISITOR

C. M. Pierce and family of Los Angeles are here this week on their annual visit with relatives and friends, after first going to Union county. Although Mr. Pierce himself may be called back to Los Angeles soon, his family will remain for several weeks and will probably go to the mountains.

If Charles goes back to California before his vacation is over, it will be because of his self-imposed duties as a sort of year-round Santa Claus to the orphan children of the big southern city. He now has a scheme on foot to secure and charter a special train to take these orphaned little ones of Los Angeles to San Francisco for the big fair. If he can only hypnotize or persuade the railroad company into furnishing the special train, Charles will do the rest. The moment he hears that his request has been granted he will hasten south to arrange the details.

Santa Claus Pierce is widely known in the City of Angels, where he has been good for scores of columns of space in the newspapers. He used to run free trips for the orphans on his "Balloon Route Excursions." When he retired from this pursuit and went to ranching and real estate, he would bring in huge truck loads of vegetables and fruits to give to his proteges. The trucks were loaned him by the Los Angeles Times, which shows him in one picture in the act of distributing vegetables at needy homes, and in another giving away apricots to eager children. The Times says of him:

"It would be a great thing for the very poor of this city if there were more men like Pierce. Everybody will applaud him and his spirit of benevolence and wish him success in many more missions of the same kind."

BETTER THAN EVER

Frontier Days at Walla Walla Will Be a Wonderful Occasion.

Walla Walla, Wash., August 12.—On the morning of September 16th, Frontier Days opens with a bang; then comes the day of the wildest excitement known to modern times. Three days, during which thousands of spectators gaze into an arena where men and women of phenomenal courage and skill, contend with the wild cattle and horses gleaned from the western ranges.

During Frontier days civilization is forgotten; the wireless telegraph and the x-ray become a thing of the past, and the muzzle loading rifle takes their place. Here's the pioneer—the leader of the day, and he is cheered by thousands as he passes in the big parade. Here's the old Indian, who fought with nerve of steel to check the hardy pioneer as he pushed westward.

"Kliahim Six, today you're the heap big tye." Here's the wiry cowboy with his rattlesnake hat band, and his high heeled boots. "Stay with 'em, Bill." "Let 'em Kick." Here's the long horned steer from the hill country, and the wild cayuses from the western ranges. Here's the dinky buffalo from the plains and the graceful elk from the mountain slopes. All these are put together and squeezed into three of the liveliest, scrappiest, wildest days that human genius ever ventured to conceive.

There are 30 events for each day, and each event is a show in itself. You can see a race where 50 wild horses are turned loose among 50 riders. Each man catches his horse, saddles it and then rides it—fate only knows where; it might be through a dozen fences. Nevertheless, he rides it and a wilder mix-up cannot be imagined. All kinds of riding and roping are displayed, and there are races of every description, with famous riders from every part of the United States.

Frontier days is not only a great show, but a great opportunity. From the first crack of the pistol on the morning of the sixteenth to the last dying blaze of the pioneer's fire on the night of the eighteenth, the old West, of which everyone has heard so much, fills everything with its presence and carries the spectator away in such a whirl of wonder and excitement that he is forced to carry it in his memory as the big event of his life.

THISTLEDOWN

Hang it all, we refuse to acclaim a girl as beautiful just because in posing for a Portland newspaper artist she shows her teeth like a cussed crocodile pursuing a plump pickaninny.

Our congratulations to Karl Guitt, who is invited to come to Weston if he wants to see a good town.

Next season's manager of the local ball team is herewith advised to get in touch with George Cutshaw, second baseman of the Brooklyn Nationals, who registered the other day six lusty blows in six times at bat.

And Luther Shellenberger, who makes the mortar for Weston's new store building, is herewith advised to run for Congress—he is such a good mixer.

The grave financial error of President Frank Menefee, who testified that he put $103,000 into and took $91,000 out of the United States Cashier company, lay in putting in $103,000.

"This week Portland is treating the buyers as friends and fellow-citizens,"—Oregonian.

Ordinarily, we presume, she throws them into the Willamette river to see if they know enough to keep their heads above water.

If there's anything in a name, Menefee should have stuck to his law practice.

In defying both North and South America, Carranza may find that he has included too much territory.

In the following official pronouncement the German government achieves a fairly good imitation of Satan denouncing the Angel Gabriel:

"Right on the heels of the outbreak of the present war a turbulent insurrection broke forth in Belgium against
