THISTLEDOWN

Whatever else may result from the recent A B C adjustment of the Mexican muddle, the satirical Oregonian will inevitably continue to criticize the administration.

While speeding motorists have been heard to refer to Weston as a sort of earth wart, we notice that they no longer bump into it with their erstwhile easy and nonchalant insouciance—nor, likewise, with their chug chug wagons.

Rex Lampman writes us confidentially as follows:

"Why don't you call Boyd a coprolite? I used to call a man named Brewer that in the halcyon era when I had a country paper and didn't owe anyone in North Dakota."

But what did a coprolite ever do to us, that we should thus cast obloquy upon it?

If Villa had ever gotten a good personal whack at his triumphant rival, Carranza might not have been quite so easy to recognize.

Notwithstanding the rough stough (or ruff stuff) that Portland newspaper jokersmiths are pulling about the ankle watch, we'll bet that none of 'em ever got near enough to one to tell the time o' day.

The Pythians are Damoning in Portland, but we wouldn't go so far as to say that if a body trailed along he could see ten knights in a bar room.

The Phillies were in deep water Tuesday, for they couldn't get to Shore.

The following frolicsome stuff appears in the Pendleton Weekly Bulldozer. We're going to give it wide publicity, for after the Glad New Year such jests will be decidedly passe:

"Mr. (censored) is a pretty steady going sort of fellow and a good citizen of the Round-up village, but once in a long time he goes out with the boys. Recently he staid with them so long that he lost his equilibrium and his tongue got somewhat sticky. About 3 a. m. the boys put him in the back seat of an auto and his sagging body immediately slipped down until the back of his neck bore most of the weight. The auto stopped in front of his home and the boys told him to get out and go to bed. 'Oh no, fellers,' he said, 'lesh don't go home yet. Lesh all go out and get drunk.'"

We look not for the ankle watch—
For wouldn't it be shocking
To drop our eyes and see two hands
Upon a lady's stocking!

The Phillies and Red Sox are going to make a tour of the Pacific Coast, and Weston herewith hastens to offer them the use of a fair-to-middling diamond free of charge if they'll let the local magnate carry water.

We arise to rebuke unjust discrimination. Mayor Harbour of Weston has visited Portland many times, and has never yet been fussed over like Mayor Thompson of Chicago.

war, like fire, may be the result of incendiarianism, and that insurance against it is a wise precaution. Quick to catch the pulse beat of public opinion, both great parties are now for a better army and navy. The Republicans would like to monopolize this sort of thunder if they could and to let the Democrats carry the "pork barrel." But the "Great Unwashed" have ears with which to hear and eyes with which to see. The hunk of bread is in their hands and they do not intend to drop it with the buttered side down. They have the inside track and a good start. They can and will act while the Republicans talk. President Wilson has come out strongly for preparedness. Secretary Garrison has submitted an effective yet economical army program. Secretary Daniels proposes to double the number of warships. Ex-secretary Bryan is outside the breastworks, where he cannot embarrass the party with his pacifist notions. Of a verity the Democratic party isn't all ears, hide, hoofs and tail. Its skull contains a certain modicum of gray matter.

The late Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway made her first speech at Weston for equal suffrage one-third of a century ago. She spoke from the balcony of the St. John hotel, and her arguments were forceful and shrewd. Equal suffrage was then a doctrine new and strange, and her reception from press and public was more or less derisive, here and elsewhere. Undismayed, she held her flaming torch aloft, and lived to see Oregon and many other commonwealths converted to her cause. People ceased to criticize equal suffrage from the standpoint of expediency, and to recognize the indubitable right of woman to the exercise of the ballot when she has a common interest with man in the maintenance of good government. The LEADER joins with a host of others in honoring the memory of the mother and pathfinder of this great cause in Oregon.

SURPRISE FOR WESTON

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler's, the appendicitis preventative, surprises Weston. It draws so much foul matter from the system that ONE SPOONFUL relieves sour stomach, gas and constipation AT ONCE. H. Goodwin, druggist.

Wilmington, Del.—Mrs. M. K. Grant, a wealthy woman, gave a horse party in honor of the 14th birthday of her pet carriage horse "Trice Grant." A luncheon was served in the stable, and an orchestra played throughout the festivities.

Mrs. R. G. Saling Entertains Guild.

The members and guests of All saints guild were entertained at their October meeting by Mrs. Ralph G. Saling at her home on Water street. The society and hostess, on this occasion, extended a warm welcome to the Weston teachers—Miss Emma Johnson, who has contributed much of interest to the guild gatherings during the past year, and to her fellow teachers, who were given a hearty invitation to contribute in a similar manner by uniting with its membership.

A short musical program was rendered. Two songs, "The Valley of Laughter" by Fred Bowler, and "Andita," an Italian waltz song by La Arditi, were charmingly sung by Mrs. Saling. A piano solo, a Schubert-Liszt song, "The Bird Die Ruby," was played to an appreciative audience by Mrs. Lillian Prodericks. A profusion of novelties had been tastefully and effectively used by the hostess in autumnal garniture, and the appearance of the rooms was very pleasing. Delicious refreshments were served, after which the enjoyable afternoon closed with expressions of appreciation from all.

The guests entertained were Mrs. D. R. Wood, Mrs. G. R. Robinson, Mrs. F. Skinner, Mrs. W. S. Payne, and Mrs. Lillian Purdy of Portland; Miss Lucile Cogswell, Miss Louise Rintoul, Miss Nellie Workman, Miss Alberta Dreyden, Miss Olive Kilmer and Miss Maud Ager. The guests enlisted as members were Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Robinson, and the Misses Cogswell, Rintoul and Workman.

The guild's next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Marvin Price on Thursday afternoon, November 4.

More Rockefeller Press Blush.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., didn't invent the press agency, but he has marvelously adapted and adopted it. We are told in front page headlines that he recently dared death from a dynamite blast, in company with common workmen of his Colorado mines. That is fine, heroic stuff. It laments good to the laborer as he picks his teeth with a broomstraw and peruses the daily paper, after his coffee and coffee. If Junior had faced the riotous gun of militiamen in Colorado's recent labor bickerings, and bade them cease firing he would be a helluva fellow, in very sooth. While his press agency is seeking to pull the public string with fair fancies ament his comradeship with the miners, the public is coyly waiting for this "son of the richest man in the world" to demonstrate that he is anything other than a pulling parallel of his paraffined progenitor.
