only to a mild feeling of amusement. "If the old state normal school at Weston cannot be revived—and it seems doubtful to say the least—the logical thing is to work for some other solution of the problem and the teachers themselves have taken the lead with a constructive suggestion. Their recommendation originated with themselves and not with Pendleton. It will abolish this city from charges of selfishness in the matter and from accusations of disloyalty to Weston."

VIEW OF VON BERNHARDT

One of the most noteworthy articles inspired by the war appeared in last Sunday's Oregonian. It was written by General P. Von Bernhardt, the great German militarist whose influence upon the thought of his countrymen is supposed to have had not a little to do with bringing about the present conflict. It is not our purpose to review this article, since to attempt to do so would be foolish in the brief space at the command of a country paper. We merely say that those who wish to read an able and authoritative German statement on the war's progress will do well to provide themselves with it. One phase of it is of especial interest, and also full of hope. We understand in close touch with German strategy. Writing in September, he predicts almost precisely the conditions that are obtaining now—both in the Balkans and elsewhere.

We quote herewith the concluding paragraph of the article, which undoubtedly epitomizes German thought: "Thus do the Germans stand at this critical turning point in the history of their holy war, full of legitimate pride at the thought of their achievements, and also full of hope. We underestimate neither our enemies nor the means which they have at their disposal. But we rely on the spirit of the German nation and of the German army, and we derive our confidence in the final triumph of the German cause from the consciousness which we have of combating, with the help of God, for freedom and justice against powers who are fighting with weapons of calumny and hypocrisy in order to satisfy a base cupidity and a ferocious egotism utterly inaccessible to all noble impulses."

Strong, high-sounding, noble phrases. Yet like all other German writers, Von Bernhardt fails to adduce any convincing proof that the Entente Allied nations are responsible for the great war. We wish he would give us some inside facts as to whether or not France sought a closer understanding with Germany not long before the war, and was turned down; as to whether or not Germany refused to join with France, England and Russia in an effort to arbitrate the Austro-Serbian dispute. Mere assertion is insufficient—even from a man of Von Bernhardt's standing.

RURAL CREDIT AND RURAL THRIFT

The South, the West, and the Northern agricultural states have much to learn in the way of rural thrift from the New England rural communities. The constant cry is easier credit for the farmer, but what the farmer most needs is more thrift. Some of the Southern states are cursed with crop lien laws which are holding back the rural communities by allowing a man to mortgage his future work and hopes and keep him constantly in debt instead of allowing him to lay something aside. It is an astonishing fact that Massachusetts has five times more savings bank deposits than have twelve southern states. In Massachusetts there are 2,340,000 people and 2,350,000 of them have savings bank deposits. In three years the savings banks in connection with the public schools showed 1,400,000 deposits. Every school in the rural communities ought to have a course of "thrift talks," whereby the teacher could lay before the scholars the necessity of saving a portion of whatever money they might earn. This money could be deposited in savings banks and, later, when it has grown, could be used to purchase good, safe bonds paying three and one-half to five per cent interest. The child mind, as well as the minds of those who are older, should be impregnated with the fact that it is not what one earns that makes a competency for old age, but what one lays aside.—Exchange.

BEWILDERED MAN FALLS FORTY FEET

Elmer R. Lytle Badly Hurt by Tumbling off Local Trestle.

Elmer R. Lytle was seriously and perhaps fatally injured Sunday evening in a fall from the railway trestle below town. Lytle came in on the evening train from Pendleton, and is said to have been under the influence of intoxicants. Intending to walk to town, he wandered instead upon the trestle across Pine creek. Just east of the depot, upon reaching a point about forty feet above the ground he fell from the trestle, alighting upon his stomach. The deep imprint of his body was later found in the soft earth. Lytle was not immediately incapacitated by his fall. Getting to his feet, he made his way to the house of Hezekiah Key underneath the trestle, and hammered on the door. Key refused to let him in, and next word to the officers up town, Marshal Wilson and Officer Edwards took Lytle into custody and walked with him up the creek bank and as far as the wheat warehouse. He then refused to go further and they had to drag him along until an automobile could be summoned, when he was conveyed to jail.

It developed next morning that Lytle's injuries were of a serious nature, his kidneys having been badly contused. There being no one here to take care of him, he was conveyed to the county hospital Monday for treatment. He is about 45 years old, and has a wife and six children living at Aberdeen, Wash. He was formerly a resident of Walla Walla.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—On the 4th of July seven years ago, Salvador Amat, then 1 year old, was shot accidentally by his older brother. Paralysis followed, and the boy died recently, after lingering for seven years.

EASIER SAID THAN DONE

The four-county teachers' institute in recent session at Pendleton passed a resolution favoring the establishment of an Eastern Oregon Normal at Pendleton.

Whatever effort this may have cost the institute could better have been saved for more fruitful work. Such a resolution is foolish because needless and untimely.

There is already an Eastern Oregon Normal in possible at Pendleton or elsewhere until the law creating this one is repealed. The buildings are still here, the grounds are here, and are available for use by the state whenever it feels the need of such a school.

However, were this not the case, it is altogether improbable that an Eastern Oregon Normal could or would be established at Pendleton. Our ambitious county seat and its pedagogical well wishers have no idea, perhaps, what they would "bump up against."

They would encounter the opposition of every Willamette valley county having a sectarian school in its midst; they would be howled down by Marion county, which wants no state institution outside of Salem; they would encounter the organized opposition of Portland Catholics, who support their own parochial schools and are at heart opposed to normal schools as a part of a public educational system; they would be quietly fought, also, by many school teachers who like not the idea of competition by normal trained colleagues in a state where they now have pretty much their own way.

Moreover, Union and Baker counties would derisively point out that Umatilla county wants altogether too much state pay, having already the Eastern Oregon hospital, and would judge the Eastern Oregon Normal again as they have in the past.

Altogether the prospect is not an encouraging one. However, if Pendleton wants to acquire a little painful experience of its own, it has The Leader's gracious permission. We consider the probability of its ever acquiring an Eastern Oregon Normal as so beautifully remote that the following remarks in the East Oregonian move
