From 25 acres of wheat on the Wild Horse Edgar Simpson had a yield of 527 sacks.

McBride Bros. & O'Hara housed their threshing outfit Friday after a run of 11 days.

D. B. Banister had a wheat crop of 40 bushels per acre on the M. M. Johns place near Athena.

Forty acres of the La Brache estate near Athena yielded the fifty little wheat crop of 794 sacks.

The Schneider-May-Hall-Dowd outfit began threshing Monday in Dick French's barley on the Weston uplands.

The Smock & Herndon outfit began threshing Monday in W. L. Smock's barley on the Reed and Hawley uplands.

Jim J. Culley has finished the local threshing season with his "waterfall combine." He contemplates shipping the outfit to southern Idaho.

At his place near Saxe station Lewis Geiss cropped a little more than 7000 acres of early heavy club wheat from 370 acres. He sold early in the season.

The bumper wheat crop of the year so far reported to the LEADER was had by Joe Key from 91 acres of his holdings. The tract yielded 2186 sacks, or around 61 bushels to the acre.

One of the best of the reservation crops is reported from the Spring Hollow district, where J. A. Lumden's spring-sown wheat on summer fallow yielded 50 bushels to the acre.

Joe Hodgson is now threshing in the field west of his house, about 155 acres, at Meadowbrook farm. This field is running strong, and is thought to be good for an average of 50 bushels.

E. L. Woods harvested a crop of 2800 sacks of wheat and barley from 165 acres of his holdings in the west part of his farm, near the south of Astoria. The yield was 45 bushels to the acre, and is undisturbed by market conditions.

With their Holt Special combine Banister & Lee have a few days more of work to finish a 30 days' run. Scott Banister, the firm's senior member, had an average yield of 45 bushels from 179 acres. In one of their best days Banister & Lee threshed 1193 sacks.

J. M. Banister's yield from 127 acres of the Joe Lavender place on the reservation was 43 bushels to the acre. His home place near Weston averaged about 40 bushels. Around the edge the wheat was very heavy, but grew thinner and lighter as the center of the field was approached.

W. E. Woods cropped 8000 sacks of wheat and barley from 320 acres of the Price brothers' holdings in the Dry creek district, which he is farming under lease. Wilbur had to buy 150 more grain bags than he anticipated, but did so without a murmur. He has sold his crop.

J. R. Hart had 16 sacks of wheat to the acre from 165 acres of his holdings near Walla Walla. His yield was larger than early conditions indicated in the neighborhood, and he is well pleased with the fruits of his year's work. Mr. Hart has sold only a small part of his wheat.

J. E. Scrimsher's fields in the Wild Horse neighborhood were hit hard by the June hail. He had 45 acres of spring-sown barley of which hardly a vestige remained, but some of it grew up again and the field yielded 500 sacks. His wheat was also damaged, the yield being cut to 35 bushels per acre.

Joe Sheard's crop in the LaMar gulch district was not quite up to its usual annual standard, although he threshed 43 bushels to the acre from 160 acres. His new Blawie worked nicely, its best day's run being 400 sacks. The motor-driven separator was easily hauled by 16 horses, and cut a swath of 16 feet.

Joe Cannon's steam outfit has finished threshing in the lowlands and was moved Tuesday to the Weston uplands, where it will complete a total run of about 56 days. It encountered light grain in the region at the head of Gerking flat, where its best day's run was 940 sacks. The yield was around 30 bushels per acre. Crops threshed were those of John Walker, Ira McDonald, Henry Barrett, J. J. Jarvis, Jim Zerba and Ora Cannon.

From less than 100 acres of wheat in the Wild Horse neighborhood P. A. and T. L. McBride filled 1890 sacks. In parts of the field untouched by floods and rain the yield ran as high as 40 bushels to the acre. The McBride boys had an "eighty" of barley in the same locality which made rather an unusual showing. They finished seeding it May 16, and on June 21 it was cut down to the roots by a fierce hail storm. They mowed the old stalks, finishing this work July 7. Springing up again, the barley matured, and they got 40 bushels to the acre from it the last day of August. On their home place north of town their barley yield was around 65 bushels per acre, and having disposed of their total crop at good figures they have no complaint to make of the year 1915.

THE BROTHERHOOD VICTORY.

Congress was not coerced into enacting the eight-hour law for railroad workers. Any such notion is a mistaken one, although seemingly held by a number of people who visualize Labor as a frowning Colossus with spike-studded club upheld above the nation's legislative body.

Congress could have refused to pass this law and would not have been disturbed, individually or collectively. The railroad brotherhoods, 400,000 strong, would then have gone on strike, which they had a perfect right to do, and until such time as the railroad could have replaced them the country's commercial, industrial and agricultural activities would have been almost completely paralyzed.

It was purely a business proposition. It was not good business for Congress to pass a law that should have no effect at a time when every locomotive and every car are needed to carry on the nation's traffic. It therefore heeded President Wilson, who in this as in other crises has shown an abiding respect for the rights of the people to give him credit, whatever the Republican candidate and spellbinders may say about it. The wisdom of the senate majority was unshaken, however, by the minority, who exhibited a narrow partisanship that should by no means have a good effect upon the fortunes of the Republican party. But one Republican senator, La Follette of Wisconsin, voted for the eight-hour law. The other Republican senators virtually declared by their votes that they were willing the country should be plunged into industrial and commercial stagnation rather than that a Democratic Administration and Congress be given credit for common sense avoidance of a threatened calamity.

Whatever may have been the merits of their demands, the railroad brotherhoods are entitled to admiration for scoring an indubitable victory. They did not act until their organization was so strong that not only the great magnates but the national government felt impelled to give them a respectful hearing. In the parlance of the street, they "wanted theirs," and they set about to get it in the only practical way open to them—the present competitive system of society. In wanting all they could get, they do not differ one iota from the capitalist, the merchant, the railroad or industrial magnate, the farmer, doctor, lawyer, rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief. Their loudest opponents would have said a different song should their own lot have been cast by fate with a railroad brotherhood. The old proverb concerning the gored ox holds good in this as in every other aspect of our social, industrial and business life. When in the course of time our spiritual and mental vision becomes clearer, when the "brotherhood of man" is
