PEACE PROPOSALS MADE BY POPE

Washington .-- Pope Benedict made peace proposals Tuesday which were not unexpected to the United States, nor to any of the entente allies.

That the peace offer will require an answer is readily acknowledged by officials but it is believed that the interests of the allies will require a rejection. It is virtually certain that the proposals cannot be accepted in their present form.

The first appraisal of officials and diplomats was that the offer was merely another attempt by Germany to bring an end to the war. The impression was general that /the imperial government used Austria because of the latter's close relation to the vatican to influence a new peace offer.
