BREVITIES

Dr. and Mrs. Watts left Wednesday for a visit at Portland.

Mrs. J. W. Porter and daughters returned Friday from an extended visit at Walla Walla.

Mrs. Z. C. Price, Claud Price and family and Miss Anna Lavender left Tuesday for an outing at Camp McDougal.

Lost—Ford wheel and Federal tire between Weston and Athena Sunday night. Reward. Liberty Auto Co.

Marion Dixon returned Saturday from St. Mary's hospital, Walla Walla, where he has been receiving treatment for his injured foot.

Joe Cannon was in town Tuesday on his way to harvest his upland crop. His wheat near Athena averaged about 41 bushels per acre.

Considerably "under the weather," Louie Christenson has come down from his mountain farm in order to more conveniently receive medical attention.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. West of Portland, who have been guests of the R. G. Salings, left last week for Spokane. They will also visit Seattle before returning home.

Mrs. Lizzie Lansdale was in Pendleton Saturday, visiting her little grandson at the maternity hospital. The youngster was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Narkaus, whose happiness is extreme.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Maybee of Pasco, Washington, were visiting relatives last week in Weston, their former home. Their son Loren, who is in the government service as wireless operator, is on his way home from Panama.

J. S. Lieuallen and family have returned to their home here from Rieth, Oregon. Joe gave up his position as railroad blacksmith at Rieth to a returned soldier, but is on the government list for employment when a vacancy occurs.

Geo. B. Carmichael was caught in the tumbling rod while the Key-Johnson-Schrimp outfit was threshing at the Carmichael farm the other day. He was fortunate enough to escape serious injury, but when he got loose he hadn't much raiment left to speak of except one leg of his B V D's.

C. H. (Bud) Nelson has bought 560 acres of good wheat land seven miles from La Crose, Washington, at $125 an acre. The ranch is well improved and well watered, one half of it is in summer fallow and the farming outfit goes with it. Bud leaves soon with his family to take charge of his new holdings, and is delighted over the prospect of becoming an honest farmer once again.

Last Friday two bears were fighting near the Tamarack church on Weston mountain and tumbled into the road during their fierce encounter. Dick English happened along on horseback at the time, and having a shotgun with him fired into the furry entanglement. He hit one of the bears in the neck, and leaving its other enemy it charged Dick's horse. Dick fired again and stopped the furious beast, which then followed the other bear into the brush. Dick regrets that he did not have a rifle, in order that some bear meat might have come his way from the unusual adventure.

Orval B. Walden, a Weston soldier who smelled much powder in France, is at home again after sixteen months of service overseas with the Fourth Ammunition Train. He wears four stars on his service bar, having done his bit in four major operations. His was dangerous work, as the Heinies took especial delight in shelling ammunition trains. He had not a few "close shaves," but got through all right and is in tip-top trim. After the armistice he was with the army of occupation in Germany. Orval is more than glad to get back, saying that he is perfectly willing to leave Germany to the Germans and France to the French.

While motoring home to Chelan, Washington, from Wenatchee, L. W. Barnes ran his car off a grade for a drop of 50 feet. "Lorry" went with the car, but when he recovered consciousness was back on the road—and doesn't know how he managed to crawl up. He lost several teeth and was seriously cut and bruised. Fortunately a doctor happened along in an automobile and he received early attention. Mr. Barnes had taken his daughter, Lois, and son, Ford, to Wenatchee and left them there. Had they been with him the mishap might have been more serious in its consequences. The car, a new one, was utterly demolished.

SAVE AND PAY UP

Dr. and Mrs. Smith and Dr. and Mrs. McKinney motored to Pendleton Monday evening to attend a motion picture show. Upon their return they ran out of gasoline while midway between Athena and Weston, and the two doctors had to walk back to Athena after this essential fluid. The incident, of course, could not properly be described as a paradox—merely as a pair o' docs perambulating while the wives of their respective bosoms patiently waited.

G. W. Staggs & Son have finished harvesting 34 bushels to the acre from 400 acres, and the senior member of the firm has moved back to town with his family. He is pleased over the crop, which in view of the dry season exceeded his expectations. The firm reseeded 100 acres which yielded a little better than the rest of the ground, although not a drop of rain fell on it since it was planted.

Charley Hall says there is lots of news in Freewater and it ought to be a good place in which to run a paper. While over there the other day he saw a dog fight on the street and also saw a bellicose woman "soak" a man in the jaw for trying to stop the canine combat. She owned one of the dogs, and wanted no armistice.

George Walden has returned from Walla Walla, where he has been employed with a railroad paint crew, in order to be with his father, whose long illness continues serious. He at once secured employment at carpenter work for Jones & Jones.

State highway engineers were here again Tuesday and made a tentative survey of the Washington street route through Weston. This route comes down back of the Dr. Watts residence and the Saling corner, making a round turn.

W. L. Rayborn is having a painful time at his home in the uplands with an attack of sciatic rheumatism following the mumps. The latter ailment has afflicted several members of the Rayborn family.

W. H. Benefiel, for many years a highly-respected resident of Weston, died August 15 at his home in Portland of cerebral hemorrhage. He is survived by Mrs. Benefiel.
