

The Golden Harvest is On

Huckleberries are ripe—and peace to the campers, for the jail-breaking murderers are now wearing Oregon Boots.

If justice be done, we'll have something to go to this Fall other than the Round Up.

Gee! This is a great world! We observe that every Harvest we have endured we have lived the whole year through.

NOW FOR A SPUD WAREHOUSE

This is an opportune time to take hold of the potato business that is being brought to local attention by The Farmers Bank of Weston; and the Leader hopes the opportunity will not be lost by the growers of this section.

Growers are urged to send their replies promptly to the bank and to attend a meeting that will be called later. Think it over. Figure what you would have saved in past seasons had your potatoes been stored where you could have sold them at the right time. Make a memorandum of any questions that may come to your mind, so that when the meeting is called you will be in a position to get the most from it.

The Farmers Bank has received a number of encouraging letters in connection with the potato warehouse project. The following is an excerpt from one of them, written by R. A. Blanchard, who is now president and general manager of the Northern Livestock Loan Co., Portland, and was formerly a government employe:

"When I was with the Government in Central Oregon, we organized the Des Chutes Valley Potato Growers Association, rented a warehouse, signed up the membership with their crops and sold our potatoes from 35 to 50 cents per bushel above the ordinary run. We set up grades, pack, etc., and maintained a regular manager on a fractional charge per bushel."

James M. Cox is under no pledges to Tammany nor to any of the democratic state bosses. He is under no pledges to the wet element, nor to anybody. He was and is a free agent. That he has chosen to follow the ideal of the League of Nations—the greatest ideal that has ever inspired the democratic party or any party—shows a breadth of vision, a grasp of world statesmanship, that should be part of the qualifications of the president of the United States. Whether it wants to or not, the United States can never pursue an isolated course. It is involved in world commerce, in world industry and in world politics, and will some day again be involved in world war unless some effective insurance measure, as intended by the League of Nations is successful in preventing war. The league may not do so, but is of all events worth the test of honest trial. Cox has taken the right course in his strong and unequivocal speech of acceptance. He has nailed the right colors to the democratic mast. With his party he stands for world progress, world hope and altruism. If he is beaten it will be defeat in a glorified cause—a defeat without discredit.

Russian cities are known to be in a state of near starvation, and its transportation system approaching paralysis. The peasant, who constitutes by far the largest class in Russia, is distrustful of the cities and of the bolshevik government, and what little food he raises he keeps. It is among present world mysteries, therefore, how Russia has managed to equip and move a large and victorious army. Perhaps it is the last convulsive effort of a red autocracy that is belied by some observers to be on its last legs—being driven from the pillar of urban communism to the post of peasant individualism. The communists, who are few in number but very active, want common ownership of land. The peasant has the land, stolen in large measure from confiscated estates, and intends to keep it or die defending it. Meanwhile the approach on Warsaw is only one phase of a problem that will continue to grow bigger and more formidable until Russia collapses into complete stauism or manages to get a stable and enlightened government. It is one of the many troubles the world owes to the Hapsburgs and the Hohenzollerns.

More than 85 percent of federal taxes go to pay war costs, and these taxes are now six or seven times what they were prior to the recent great struggle. The United States has out $24,000,000,000 in bonds and notes, floated to pay for war. Such figures are appalling, not to consider the cost of war in the blood of the nation's young manhood. Is not the League of Nations worthy of support on the ground, if nothing else, that it is the only great world movement ever attempted that promised to relieve the world of the calamity of war? Cox is for the League of Nations—his ringing speech of acceptance leaves no doubt on that point—and his election will virtually mean endorsement of the league by the United States. Harding is against the League of Nations. His election will virtually mean that the United States disavows and condemns it. In what camp are you?

Certain g. o. p. scribblers have picked a phrase out of the Cox speech of acceptance and setting it entirely apart from its context declare that it betrays his "wet" proclivities. It is: "Morals cannot easily be produced by statute." To say that this phrase, which Cox used in connection with a matter entirely foreign to prohibition, is a bid for the wet vote, is insufferably astinine. One could as well answer that another phrase, "This is no time for wobbling," is a bid for the dry vote—for the obvious reason that the boozier often wobbles when "half seas over." The subject worries us, however. It is sufficient for us to rely with full confidence on the belief that if elected Cox will lend the power of his great office to the enforcement of the laws—the dry law included. He will be true to his commendable record as governor of Ohio.

Billy Sunday says "the United States is so dry a man has to be primed before he can spit." This is a bit crude and lowbrow. We think that "expectorate" for "spit" would lend the touch of refinement that the expression seems to need.

We have his mother's own word that Parley C. Christenson, who is by way of being the third party candidate for president, "always was a bright boy." Looks as though he is sure of two votes—her'n and his'n.

We read that Walter Pierce and Bruce Dennis, rival candidates for the state senate, have agreed to stump Union county together. We knew Walter, and we think we know whose name is Dennis.

Poland is in a position to tell the world that Bolshevik Russia is a good thing to let alone—for the same reason that it is indiscreet to disturb a skunk, hedgehog or rattlesnake.

In declaring the League of Nations to be a failure the Boss Bolshevik, Lenin, lines up squarely with Hi Johnson, Hearst and Harding—yes, and with Jim Reed of Missouri.

The Great Only is to be congratulated on containing Sunday a piece or more of most excellent political reading—being the acceptance speech of Governor Cox.

A Journey Into the Wilds

After an absence of nearly a month, Col. F. G. Lucas returned this week from another long trip into northern Alberta.

He was accompanied by Charles McCarthy and Lon Hill, New York men of affairs who were acting for themselves and others in the exploration and appraisal of nearly 200,000 acres of unsurveyed Alberta land. Mr. McCarthy is a millionaire. The journey was made by rail, dog train and river and took the party into the wilderness as far north as 450 miles from Edmonton, Alberta. They had an Indian guide, a train of faithful husky pack dogs with their driver, and an Indian river pilot. They found game in great abundance. McCarthy killed a bear, Hill killed a moose and Lucas took his out in ducks. Fish were more than plentiful, so much so that taking them got to be poor sport.

The party witnessed an unusual incident. A moose had gone into the Athabasca river to escape the bulldog flies, a great pest in that region. An Indian slowly drifted down upon it in his canoe. Within jumping distance he leaped to its back and "bulldogged" and drowned it in the water.

Austin Mann and William Taylor, both 21 years of age, must go to prison because they violated paroles granted them out of the circuit court of Umatilla county.

We are showing an attractive assortment of metal beds. Look them over. You will be pleased at the range of styles and prices.
