The new census gives Umatilla county a population of 25,898, an increase of 5637 or 27.8 percent. The local enumerator, P. T. Harbour, counted 595 noses in Weston, which is quite satisfactory here, as it shows a good increase over the 1910 figure of 499. Only two towns in the county, Adams and Stanfield, show a decrease. Athena's population is 627, as against 586 in 1910.

AT CAMP McDOUGAL

The Tent City at Camp McDougal is an interesting place to visit. Some forty Weston and Athena families are at present seeking relief from sultry weather in the cooling shade of giant forest trees with which the region abounds. The abundant quantity of delicious cold spring water is a feature contributing much to the popularity of the resort. A delightful spirit of friendliness and cordiality prevails among the vacationists and they heartily welcome visitors who bide for a time in their midst.

"Aunt Sarah" McDougal, patron saint of the encampment, is always on hand extending greetings to new arrivals or waving good bye to those whose vacation days have ended.
Clad in a neat print gown and sitting in a comfortable rocking chair on the lawn in front of her cabin, the aged pioneer woman presents a picture of tranquility and well-being seldom encountered in the hurry and bustle of every-day life.

Take-It-Easy bungalow shelters the C. M. Pierce and Frank Price families. Sunday, they entertained as guests Mr. and Mrs. Newton Loveridge and celebrated the event with five luscious huckleberry pies. A sudden gnawing within was experienced by all who inhaled the spicy fragrance creeping forth from the kitchen.

"Aunt Fannie" McBride dispenses hospitality with a lavish hand at Camp Comfort. Her guests over Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Tim Mc-Bride, Mrs. Lillian Fredericks, Mr. and Mrs. H. Goodwin and Rosemary Whiteman of Pendleton.

An attractive spot in Tent City is Rest-a-While Camp, occupied by Mrs.
John O'Harra. A hand-wrought bedstead fashioned by her son, L. I. O'- Harra is an object of interest. The mattress rests upon a thick layer of fir boughs. To sleep for a night upon a bed of this type, "Pete" declares, is to enjoy one of the happiest experiences life affords.

Mrs. A. G. Winn is entertaining at Woodland Memories Camp her friend of many years, Mrs. Mary Lieuallen.
Huckleberry Lodge, the dwelling place of Mesdames C. E. Fisk, Curran McFadden and C. H. Smith, has been the busiest establishment in the region for some time past. Over 90 quarts of huckleberries have been harvested and canned by this energetic trio.

The mechanical genius of Marvin Price is strikingly apparent in the convenient appointments of Spring View Lodge, where he and his wife are spending an extended vacation.
Generous gifts of warm huckleberry pies have been known to issue from Mrs. Price's culinary department for the delectation of favored friends.

Marigold Inn, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gould, is a popular meeting place for children, grand children and other relatives of the owners. Mr. Gould's fame as an expert in the huckleberry industry has spread to neighboring counties.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. McDaniel were Sunday callers at Camp Delight, the cozy abode of Mr. and Mrs.
Dick English.

Among the popular residents of the summer colony are the J. A. McRae's of Walla Walla, who are established at Killkare Kamp. The Misses Marvel and Hilda McRae are recruits in the Knitting Circle, other members of which are Irene Banister, Mina Price, Velma and Zada Pierce. Bright hued sweaters are being fashioned by these industrious maids, and many a tale of exciting adventure is related as the work proceeds.

pathy of all.
