AND "SLUSH" MONEY HOWLS.

The big money the republican managers are trying to raise does more than talk; it is screeching its message from the housetops for all to hear.

The disclosure is not an edifying one. Sixteen millions are not needed by any political party for the legitimate expenses of a campaign. In fact, the average voter would be better pleased, we'll be bound, if neither party raised and spent any more money than sufficient to pay the expenses of its speakers. Tons of literature are not needed; neither are the obnoxious activities of party henchmen. Whatever messages of either side are of sufficient importance for the public to read are impartially carried without charge by the great news associations, while the "ward heeler" belongs to a past era of corrupting and sinister influences.

Both parties have been to blame in other campaigns; in this, the republican party is by far the more serious offender. The charges of Governor Cox which republican leaders affected to disbelieve and sought to discredit are now virtually substantiated by one of their own kidney before the senate committee. They might flout the assertions of a democratic candidate, but they will not dare deny the testimony under oath of one of their "get the money" experts.

In fact, the moral prestige of this campaign is distinctly with the democratic party and its candidate. Cox stands for human welfare; he stands for progress; he stands for the League of Nations—the only comprehensive movement ever launched for adjusting the world's troubles without recourse to war. Moreover, the League will not fail in its mission after it has been accorded the support and membership of the great United States, as yet unjustly withheld. Cox does not stand for "booze and booze alone." He has publicly declared that he has always voted dry and if elected will not seek to interfere with the operation of the eighteenth amendment.

Implement manufacturers and dealers are now declared to be profiteering, by the federal trade commission. It is found that the farmers are paying 73 percent more for implements than in 1914. It is also found, however, that the farmers have been compensated by the advance in their products and will be only be hurt by the implement situation should their products decline. Looks as though the commission concluded to take a shot at the harvester trust because it is such a big mark.

A geological survey shows the United States has enough petroleum reserves to last, comparatively, a very short while. We've been going too fast, anyhow. Perhaps it would do the nation good to return to primitive methods of locomotion until scientists develop a sufficient substitute for gasoline. And what a relief it would be to be rid for a time of the demonic motorcyclist and his buzzing device of Satan.

The disposition toward getting "all het up" over a political campaign belongs, we are glad to observe, to a past era. Around here so far the presidential contest is about as wildly exciting as would be the election of a Sunday school superintendent. Democrat is yet able to regard republican, and republican democrat, as a friend and brother—with perhaps a touch of pity for his political unwisdom.

"We are expecting any day to hear Senator Harding declare that the early period of the Garden of Eden was republican and that the fall was caused by a democratic administration taking charge of the works," remarks Columbia Record.

Permit us to remind the esteemed Oregonian that The (not a) League of Nations may perhaps be considered a bigger proposition than even the Old Guard candidate for president—who would work it over to suit his fancy.

Jimmy Cox is the kind of candidate who doesn't need the backing of a big slush fund in order to make an effective campaign. In brief, he is daily qualifying as a democratic Roosevelt.

The free automobile camping ground provided by the city is almost constantly occupied; scarcely a day passes which does not see a party of tourists stopping for a period of refreshment and relaxation. Many motorists have routed their vacation
