L. I. O'Harra, local produce buyer, reports considerable activity at the freight depot. A few days ago several cars of wheat, potatoes and brick were being loaded for shipment to outside points. At the same time a car of distillate was being delivered to consumers in the community in quantities according to previous arrangement.

One of the most beautifully appointed entertainments of the social season was the miscellaneous shower given Monday evening by Stephanie Temple, Pythian Sisters, in honor of Miss Ruby Price and Lyle Webb, whose marriage will be solemnized May 1st. The temple hall was a veritable bower of spring flowers, a canopy of apple blossoms having been arranged over the center of the room. At a given signal, a mass of fragrant pink and white petals came fluttering down, enveloping the complimented young people. A search for hidden treasures was then instituted, with the result that the betrothed couple discovered many generous gifts for use in the new home to be established. A program of music and games afforded diverting entertainment. Young men of the order presented Mr. Webb with a handsome electric reading lamp. The bride elect received from her lodge sisters a cut-glass rose bowl, with mirror reflector. At midnight a delicious two-course supper was the final feature of a most delightful affair.

Mrs. C. E. Fisk extended pleasing hospitality April 23 when she entertained at her home, members of the Saturday Afternoon Club. COME and GREET the FRIENDS of "AULD LANG SYNE"

Stopped Leak With His Body.

The story of the Dutch lad who stopped a leak in the dike by holding his hand in the hole all night has been outdone by C. A. Chrestenson, watermaster of the Sunnyside, Wash., irrigation district. With his body he checked a bad leak in the main Sunnyside canal until his companions could stem the break with earth.
