

MYRRH.

BY JOAQUIN MILNER. "And you and I have buried Love, A red seal on the coffin lid; The clock below, the court above, Pronounced it dead; your wife, And I, who never crossed your will, Consent—that you may have it still."

"What recks it now whose was the blame? But call it mine; for better used Am I to wrong and cold disdain— Can better bear to be accused Of all that wears the shape of shame, Than have you feel one touch of blame."

"I go alone; no little hands To lead me from forbidden ways, No little voice in other lands Shall cheer me on the weary days, Yet these are yours, and that to me Is much indeed, and it must be."

"I did not blame you—do not blame The stormy elements of soul That I have scorned to tone or tame, Or bind down into dull control. In full, fierce youth, they all are yours, With all their folly and their force."

"But should you some time read a sign, A name among the princely few, While you are with your friends and mine, Then careless turn to one or two; Say, 'he was mine, his smiles, his tears Were mine—years mine for years and years.'"

THE WORLD'S DEBT.—Some enterprising statistician has figured it out that the entire debt of the world amounts to twenty-two thousand billion dollars. Of this sum, forty-four hundred millions are due by France; four thousand millions by Great Britain; three thousand millions by the United States, including individual States, counties and towns; sixteen hundred millions by Austria; fifteen hundred millions by Russia; one thousand by Prussia and the German States; for hundred millions by Holland; twenty-one hundred millions by the other European States, and four thousand millions by Asia, Africa, South America, and the other countries of the world. Now, as there can be nothing gained to the world by accumulating a debt against it, why not have a World's Financial Convention in connection with Gilmore's Universal Peace Jubilee, at Boston, next year, repudiate the whole debt and let other planets look out for themselves? It would so help along the jubilee.

TRUE COURAGE.—A coal miner near Springfield, Ill., after putting in a blast and lighting the fuse, was running for a place of safety, when a companion said his leg was broken and he could not get away. With more than a soldier's courage, he retraced his steps, snatched the fuse as it was about to ignite the powder, and prevented the explosion which would have destroyed both lives.

FRIGHTENED.—The St. Louis girls were so badly frightened by the experience of one of their number who dislocated her neck while resting a kiss, that now they hold their lips in the softest and most comfortable position whenever they see a man anywhere near.

HER SENTIMENTS.—"I love to look upon a young man. There is a hidden potency concealed within his breast which charms and pains me." A daughter of a clergyman happening to find the above sentence at the close of her father's manuscript, as he had left it in his study, sat down and added: "Them's my sentiments exactly, papa—all but the pains."

Christians must give up thinking about Christianity as only a means of escaping hell, and arriving at a future heaven. They must show now, more than ever, that by a union of loving and truthful hearts, God comes here, immortality begins here, and heaven lies within.

As WELL.—A Virginia editor has come to the conclusion that a man might as well undertake to hold himself at arm's length and turn a double somersault over a meeting house steeple as to attempt to publish a newspaper that will suit everybody.

Mr. Ackerman informs Mr. Grant that unless corrupt Radicals in the South are punished, there will shortly be nothing of the party left in that section. And if they are properly punished, there will be nothing of the party left—outside the walls of penitentiaries.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A rich bachelor of New Jersey recently died, leaving by will several legacies of from ten to twenty-five thousand dollars each, to ladies who had rejected him. He said that they had afterwards grown so ugly that he could not be sufficiently grateful.
