The "Dead Party" Again,

The Radical press of Oregon is again announcing the death of the Democracy. In 1862, when the Democracy carried only one county in the State-Josephine-this same Democratic party was prononnced "dead," and we have heard the identical cry ever since, especially when the Radicals gained a victory, even if it were nothing greater than some municipal election. Yet the Democracy survived that Waterloo defeat, and soon overthrew its opponents in our State. That election was won by them under false colors, and the last was gained by fraud and The Duty of the National Convention. repeaters. They were soon defeated. During that time the bill authorizing the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, and use the military to elect himself, a civil 1 rights bill, and an amnesty bill were 2 passed, Charles Samner being asleep 2 when the latter bid got through the Scnate. It is not believed that the two first 1 | named bills can get through the House.

The various appropriation bills are nearly all through, they are largely over 1 the estimates from the Departments, for this Congress has been quite liberal in its dealings.

The Tariff bill got through the House last Monday, and the Senate has had it under consideration day and night since it was sent to that body. The Finance committee will report it to-day, and it will be considered at once by the Senate. The proposed reductions in the tariff and internal revenue will amount to about sixty million of dollars. This reduction 2 is made in view of the pending Presi dential election, with a hope that it may save the skins of those in power.

ULYSSES ON a SPREE .- Is it not a sad thing that the following lines may be written and published about a President of the United States, and under such circumstances that the mass of the people to believe them true.

We copy from a Washington letter of the 15th to the St. Louis Times : HERE WE ARE, MR. MERRYMAN.

Incidentally I mentioned that Mr President Grant was very sick - that's what the Administration papers said, but everyone understands what Grant's sicknesses are. It really was not the delirium tremens. but it really was not very different. When the madam was at home he was maintained in a very respectable condition; at least so far as the public knew. But she's away, now, you know, and he's taking every advantage of it. The only time he has been out the whole week was when he went to the circus. His brotherin-law, Casey, of New Orleans, was at the White House early in the evening. They had both been drinking, and Grant insisted upon going to the circus. All of C. s-y's argument to the contrary were in vain--the President insisted, and arm in arm the two started out. They attracted attention all along as they walked to the show, but their condition shortly after arrival there was perfectly beastly. If any one than the President of the United States had appeared thus drunken in a place of public entertainment, he would have been thrown out and handed over to the police. Grant's face is bloated and Grant's officeholders and renominate red, and the White House these days is famous for its orgies.
