Greely Campaign Song.

TUNE—"Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys, rally once again.

Shouting the battle cry of freedom. We will gather now with joy to hail the new campaign.

Not now with the sword or musket our country bids us go. Showing the battle cry of freedom.

But with the milder ballot to strike as sure a blow. Showing the battle cry of freedom.

All party feuds are dead, we'll lay them in the grave. Showing the battle cry of freedom.

And North and South united, a glorious conclave. Showing the battle cry of freedom.

Republicans and Democrats one party now we see. Showing the battle cry of freedom.

Grant's Economy of Truth. Grant's reticence is proverbial; but frugal as he is of his utterances, he seems peculiarly unfortunate in the impression he creates of the truthfulness of his statements concerning any matter in which his own interest happens to be involved.

A recent illustration of this we had in the Pleasanton-Schurz correspondence, in which the quondam Commissioner of Internal Revenue made such a delicate thrust at one of the moral delinquencies of the Executive.

But the first case that brought General Grant's inaccurate memory prominently before the country was much more glaring than the attempt to bribe Schurz; and it may not amiss at this time to call up the facts afresh for the delectation of the campaign orators and organs of the President.

General Grant, shortly after the close of the war, suffered himself to be drawn into a dilemma from which he was extricated with extreme discredit.

At the time when the Tenure-of-office bill conflict raged and Secretary Stanton was suspended from his position at the head of the War Department by President Johnson, Grant was put by the President in Stanton's place.

The Senate threatened to reinstate Mr. Stanton, and Grant was kept in by the President with the express understanding that he would either return the office to the President's possession in order to enable the President to appoint a successor before final action by the Senate, or would remain at its head awaiting a decision of the question by judicial proceedings.

In disregard of the understandings and his distinct promise to the President, Grant vacated the office when Stanton demanded it, and without giving Mr. Johnson notice of his intention to do so.

When Grant attempted to make it appear that he had not made the specified promises to President Johnson, he was confronted by the personal asseverations of members of the Cabinet, who testified to having heard him promise exactly as the President said he promised.

There was no question in any mind, at the close of the correspondence on this subject, that Grant's recollection of what he said had utterly failed him, or that he deliberately and maliciously economized the truth.

Should Be Warned Off.—One of the trumpet-ears of the Administration is its financial policy, yet though Vice-President Colfax is, under the circumstances, a Grant man, and now and then makes a Grant speech, he felt it his duty the other day, at his home in Indiana, to condemn "in the words of wisest censure," the financial policy of Boutwell and Grant.

He declared that he regarded it with alarm, and considered it as the greatest of peril of the nation.

Now, it is unkind in Mr. Colfax. If he cannot swear this Administration through its present difficulties, he should be warned off the stump by the Grant National Committee.

This is no time, Mr. Colfax, to take counsel of your conscience; if you do heed that "still, small voice," you cannot remain in Camp Grant.

Squandered.—Senator Trumbull stated in his late speech in Indianapolis, that there was "money enough squandered by office-holders under the Federal Government every year to buy a house and farm and give $1,000 to every man in the State of Indiana—and there are 400,000 men in that State."

A St. Louis grain elevator company has given an order for a belt which is to be the largest in the world. It is to be four feet in width, 286 feet long, and weighs 2,225 pounds.

How the Rattlesnakes Multiply and Repopulate the Earth.

From the Nashville American.

About the 10th of May last Drs. Cardwell and Westmoreland captured at Prospect, in the lower edge of Giles County, near the Alabama line, a rattlesnake four feet three inches long and five inches in circumference.

When captured it had eight rattles and a button. Since that time it has been confined in a glass case; it has not partaken of one particle of food, though it has been tempted with mice and other small animals on which the reptile is accustomed to feed.

The snake manifested no inconvenience from its confinement, nor did it lose any in size or bodily vitality. Its eyes continued to glisten like magnetic steel, and its luminating fangs to protrude at the appearance of any one near the case.

Dr. Cotton thought all the while it was a male. Though small mice and rats have been confined in the case with the snake until their own hunger urged them to bite at its scaly hide, the serpent refused to give them notice or to partake of food.

On two or three occasions it has taken small quantities of water. On Thursday at one o'clock on going into the back room of the store where the case is kept it was discovered that the snake had given birth to four young snakes, and by three o'clock she had given birth to three more, making seven in all.

The young snakes made their appearance one at a time and in a coil or striking position, their eyes glistening and their envenomed tongues continually darting out.

The young ones are each from nine to fifteen inches in length, and in a state of perfect development. They are quick of motion and possess no ordinary spinal vitality, as they crawl readily to the top of the case and move with celerity across and around it from end to end.

What is most singular and contrary to all the received notions concerning the reptile, each of these young snakes has a full button on the tail, which clearly refutes the idea that they have to be six months old before the formation of the button.

The old snake was lying in her cage in a lethargic state, with some indications, as the doctor thought, of increasing the coil around her, and under and over her, and she seems to have for the maternal affection of instinct.

This snake has been in captivity near four months, yet during all that period she has partaken of not a morsel of food, and has brooded her seven young. As to exactly how long from inception the process of gestation or incubation has been going on, there is no means of ascertaining, as we can only date from her captivity.

Dr. Cotton informs us that he once before kept in the same case a largesized rattlesnake for three years and nine months, and that he studied closely its various moods and changes.

This snake, he says, did not partake of a particle of food for the first nine months, and but little water. He then gave him rats, &c., putting the same into the case alive, and it commenced devouring them voraciously.

It never would touch a tame mouse, or a dead one, fresh as it might be. When a young rat was put into the case it would part its unerring fang in some part of the limb or body, and then wait until it died from the thorough inoculation of the poison.

When quite dead it would turn it over, take it head foremost and swallow it, evidently drawing nutriment from the poison its own fangs had infused. It shed its skin twice a year—each spring and autumn—a new rattle appearing at each shedding, which explodes the popular notion that but one rattle comes a year.

Yesterday morning the doctor took the case and placed it in the sun. From the effects of the sun three young ones died. Two others became stupefied, but recovered their vitality on being removed to the shade.

NINE OUT OF TEN.—The Leavenworth Commercial has been informed by an Iowa gentleman, a staunch Republican, and one who has been traveling over that State during the last six months, that at least nine out of every ten of the Germans would support Greeley and Brown.

The German vote in 1853 was about 20,000. The Republican majority was less than 40,000. Taking these figures, Grant is liable to lose Iowa, and in case he does, what State will he carry?

The Portland Argus says that there is not a town in Maine without its Greeley Club, and that the Liberals and Democrats join hands with a will.
