REPLY TO SIGMA BY A. O. Y. To thy reply "stern" sister Autumn. I answer once again; I love thy sister "Summer's" rays-And her warbling birds' sweet strain; love fair sister Spring's sweet flowers,

TO AUTUMN.

For they are angels thoughts To correspond, materialized. With love-with beauty fraught. I love the beauteous forest trees,

Array'd in mantles green; l love to hear the insects' hum Songs to their floral queen.

But when on this earth, thy step descends. And thy breath, as a zephyr doth ride On the wings of the morn, ashers thee here. And by nature's sweet gems thou'rt descried:

Then o'er the bright flowers a shadow is

And hush'd are the warbtings of birds; Mute are the insects-a sorrowful day-When first they hear thy cold words.

In my "Garden of Life" Whily once grew, I saw it when usher'd by Spring;--To me 'twas a chain of much beauty and words,

Of its loveliness rare would I sing, Fair sister "Summer" matured with eare. The gem that she knew was so lov'd. And shed her most genial and warmest of Tarys.

Thus happy; my lot by thee was assailed. And as by the "Garden" thou pass'd:

Thou waitest a breath - the filly was seared. And trembled beneath thy cold blast. one morning I walk'd-in the "pathway" I stood-
