A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

The submission of the question of the re-creation of the United States Congress has been made to the President and Vice President, and the President has sent a message to the House, in answer to which the House has been called to order, and the President has been elected by the unanimous vote of the House. The message is as follows:

The Message of the President, February 15, 1876.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The subject of the re-creation of the United States Congress is now in proper hands, and I wish to express my opinion that it is the duty of the President to take the initiative in the matter. The President of the United States is the head of the executive branch of the government, and it is the President's duty to see that the laws are faithfully executed. The President is also the leader of the Republican party, and it is the President's duty to see that the party's program is carried out.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I have no doubt that the re-creation of the United States Congress will be accomplished in a manner that will be satisfactory to all. The President of the United States will do his best to see that the laws are faithfully executed, and the President of the United States will do his best to see that the party's program is carried out.

Very truly yours,

[Signature]

The President of the United States.

A Message From the Senate.

The Senate of the United States, in re-creation of the United States Congress, this 15th day of February, 1876, have passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Senate of the United States, in re-creation of the United States Congress, do hereby appoint a committee of three members, to consist of Senators [names], to prepare and report a bill for the re-creation of the United States Congress, to be debated and enacted into a law.

GeneralDrawer

The following are the bills for the re-creation of the United States Congress, prepared by the committee of three members:

[Details of the bills are listed, including the names of the committee members who prepared them.]