Making Honest Politicians.

A great many people both men and women profess to have a perfect "horror of politics." They look upon the modes by which the government is carried on as a game in the hands of shrewd unscrupulous men, who have little regard for truth, honesty or the real prosperity of the country, but who are impelled by love of lucre, of position and power. It is common to hear politics spoken of as a Serbian dog, in which every man must be mired who attempts to reach greatness through that highway.

Now we hold, and we think the justice of our position can be established, that every man and every woman in the republic is responsible to a greater or less extent for corruption in politics. And more, that it is the duty of every individual to have a hand in the making of good politicians. How is it to be done? In the first place, "laying the axe at the root of the tree" by beginning at the cradle to inculcate lessons of truth, of honesty, of civility and social and of Christian charity, which is "Peace on earth and good will to men." It is a common saying, we have heard it a thousand times in Fourth of July and similar orations that the Bible is the corner stone of this Republic. We all believe this to be so, but how do we act in reference to this connection? How many parents taking this book as the rule of moral action, diligently instruct their children in its teachings in order that they may become good citizens. How many take pains to cultivate in their offspring the love, for its own intrinsic excellence, of that which is absolutely pure and just and true? How many teach them when tempted to go astray to reply, "How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God? There is in every man's heart a perfect antidote to this corruption in politics which is so much prattled about. Did Joseph in Egypt attain and retain his eminence at the Court of Pharaoh by bribery and chicanery? His story is full of lessons of political wisdom and sagacity. How many of us are of high capacity and incorruptible integrity, of all the elements that make statesmen great. Was it by trickery that Daniel became third ruler in Belshazzar's kingdom, and the ignorance of men and women and children, nominally Christian, of a great many characters and events portrayed in the Sacred Scriptures, is simply deplorable. You cannot find a carpenter without his rule in his pocket, and not catch a fence-man without his line or plumb-line, a railroad conductor without maps and charts somewhere about him, an editor without his newspaper, but how often do we meet men and women, nominally honest, about whom we can find no trace of this sacred line of truth and honor, this plummet of Divine rectitude, this title deed to everlasting inheritance, but must take it for granted that they have got it stowed away in some secret pocket.

As long as we have a government there must be men to administer it, and it is for the interest of every body that these men be honest; it is in the power of every father and mother in the land to contribute to this result. Instead of keeping out of politics, let every man and his part in it well and let them afterwards in the same manner, let him train his sons to imitate the demagogues of this nation—Washington and Jefferson, and Patrick Henry and Chief Justice Marshall, and John Jay—men whose names and political lives were equally steadfast.

Men and women of high virtue are no more the result of an accident than the raising of eighty bushels of shelled corn to the acre is an accident. Miracles do not happen in the nineteenth century. The seed that is sown in good ground brought forth abundantly; that ground had been carefully prepared; it was not hard like the wayside, woody or without depth of earth, but well tilled, moist and fertile. This is the truth about the moral soil. Our greatest divines, our noblest statesmen, our most eminent philosophers and scientists, are the blossoms of generations of culture and intelligence, of morality and virtue.

Sitting in children's chairs around the fireside, playing with hoop or ball, or marbles, coming the primer and the multiplication table, are the future law makers, Governors, Senators, Presidents of our country. Shall they be honest in their dealings, truth-abiding, God-fearing men? Or, whom, oh father! oh mother! does this depend?—N. Y. Tribune.

Senator Carl Schurz.

The New York Sun, April 25th, chronicles the departure of Senator Schurz and family for Europe, says: The Senator intends to visit the principal European cities, particularly those of the Fatherland. Carl Schurz was born in Liblar, near Cologne, March 2, 1821, and studied at the collegiate institution at Cologne, and afterward at the University at Bonn. He went from the University dreaming of a German Republic and a liberal newspaper. He fostered the revolutionary spirit which culminated in actual hostilities near the year 1848. Abandoning his editorial chair he joined the ranks of the revolutionists, taking part in the defense of Rastatt. Defeated he fled to Switzerland, then to Paris and London. In London he was a teacher and a correspondent for three years. Meantime the Prussian Government expelled him from his land, and the decree was that if ever found on German territory he should be shot. A few years ago, through the influence of Prince Bismark, the German Government revoked his disability, and in recognition of his genius extended an invitation to revisit his native land. The whole American people, without distinction of party, will wish him pleasure and a happy return.

Several families have come into Douglas county within the last few days from Missouri and Iowa. They are well pleased with the country.

A Sad History.

From the Venango (Pa.) Spectator. There is now employed in this city as a house servant, a woman who was a few short years ago the wife of a young lawyer in Butler county. A few happy marriages there was a short year of wedded love and the birth of a daughter. Then came estrangement and aversion on the part of the husband, ending in his desertion of wife and child. Left penniless and broken hearted, the poor mother, struggling to support herself and child, spring, doing whatever her hands found to do, and in the course of a few years she applied for and obtained a divorce. The husband went to California, and finally settled in Oregon. He had talent, ambition and assurance—three great requisites for success in life. Dabbling in politics, he awoke one morning to discover that the Legislature of Oregon had elected him to the Senate of the United States. He had left the wilds of Butler only some years before, he being then a child, to escape the silken bonds of his marriage, which had become galling fetters of iron. Then his name was John Mitchell Hipple but the Senator, when the years and mays are called, will answer to the name of John H. Mitchell. The Mitchell of Oregon is the Hipple of Butler county. He will sit in the Chamber that once echoed to the ringing periods of Webster and Clay, courted, flattered and honored as a rising, perhaps a Christian, Statesman. All that man will ask or promise for the future will be his. His lines have fallen in pleasant places.

Surely, the mutations of life are beyond our comprehension. Fiction preads, in all its ranges, no greater contrast of fate or fortune than that between Hipple or Mitchell, in the Senate of the United States, and the once cherished wife of his bosom, a menial in a Franklin Hotel. He is the guest of earth's great ones; the poor wife the world goes of men of historic fame; she a tedious slave, "who dines from off the plate shalately washed" with no hope of a brighter day this side of the grave. Yet who can say that her lot, dark and gloomy as it seems, is less happy than his? Who knows that there is constantly before him torturing visions of a deserted woman and a little child?—phantoms that will not cut at his bidding.

Antiquity of the L. O. O. F.

We find the following in an old English paper, from a speech delivered by Mr. Cooper, at a meeting of the Order, in Greenock, in Scotland. Mr. Cooper said: "The origin of the order of Odd Fellows is of very great antiquity. It was established by the Roman soldiers in the camp, during the reign of Nero, in the year 58. At that time there was a man called Felix (Chiron). The present name was given them by Titus Cesar, in the year 79, from the singularity of their meeting, and from their knowing each other by night or by day, and by their fidelity to him and their country. He not only established the name of Odd Fellows but at the same time, as a pledge of friendship, presented them with a dispensation engraven on gold, bearing the different emblems, such as the Sun, Moon and Stars, and the Lamb and the Dove, and other emblems of morality. The first account of the order being spread in other countries, is in the fifth century, when it was established in the Spanish dominions, and in the sixth century by King Henry in Portugal, and in the twelfth century it was established in France, and afterwards by John De Nevill, in England, attended by five knights from France, who formed a Loyal Grand Lodge of Honor in London, which order remained till the 11th century, when a part of them began to form themselves into a union, and a portion of them remain up to this day in the Lodges which are now very numerous, throughout the world, and call themselves the Loyal Ancient Odd Fellows, being a portion of the original body. The Manchester Unity is the oldest and best order, and that is no doubt of its continuing from the same source. Its first introduction into Manchester was about the year 1800, by a few individuals from the Union in London, who formed themselves into a Lodge, and continued in connection with their Lodges in London, and they have since, when some difference caused them to declare themselves independent, and thus have kept the word Independent."—Patterson Intelligencer, 1848.

ABOUT ALKALI.— Humanity averages about the same the world over. There would be far greater clarity in the world were it fully understood that very many times, when one man is honored above another, it is because he is not as well known. Look out for those who cry the loudest, "step this," at the shining creature who steals a loaf of bread. If they are respected as better than common people it may be because they do not seek their glory.

To be incapable of narrow enmity and base suspicions, a mind must be expansive, and generous, learning lessons from the infinitude of the mercy and magnanimity of God. To look out for those who cry the loudest, "step this," at the shining creature who steals a loaf of bread. If they are respected as better than common people it may be because they do not seek their glory.
