

THE ENTERPRISE.

OREGON CITY, OREGON, JULY 11, 1874.

I LOVE YOU FOREVER.

I shall not forget you; the years may be long,
But vain are their efforts to soften my heart,
And the strong hands of Time are too feeble
To garland the grave that is made in my heart.
Your image is ever about me—before
Your voice floats abroad on the voice of the wind,
And the spell of your presence in absence is ever
And the dead of the past in the present I find.
I cannot forget you, the boon is ungiven;
The loom of your love is the cross that I bear;
In the midnight of sorrow I vainly have striven
To crumb in my fond heart the image hid there.
To banish the beautiful dreams that are
The halls of my memory—dreams
For the one day which held I am thirsting
For the one day which held I am thirsting
I would not forget you—I live to remember
The beautiful hopes that bloomed to decay
And brighter than June glows the
When people with ghosts of dreams
Once loving you truly, I love you forever
I mourn not in weak, idle grief for the past
But the love in my bosom can never
Pass on, or another pass in, first or last.
The First Baby.

Mothered by the Rev. Mr. Jones, J.W. Co., etc., only daughter, etc.
We didn't say no baby! I have one of these interesting animals at my house. It came when it rained like the doctor, dark as pitch, and my wretchedly ill baby, who had been running, the doctor lived five miles due west, and the nurse six miles due east; and when I got home to the beam of my family, the condensed milkman was at the next door. It's a funny little chap, that baby, but the little red lump and the length of a Bologna sausage. Cross? I guess not. Um, um, it commenced chasing me down the pathway of life just when mud, linin, and white flamed were the highest they had been since Adam built a hut for his wife, Eve's chickens. The doctors charge two dollars a squish, four dollars a grunt, and an account of the scarcity of rain in the country, take what is left a man's pocket, no discount for cash, and send bill for balance Jan. 1. A queer little thing is that baby; a speck of a nose like a wart, head as bald as a squash, and no place to latch a waterfall; a month just fitted to come the gum game and chew milk. O chuckle! you should hear her sing. I unspiced it, stuffed my fire cap down his throat, gave it the smoothing iron to play with, and then little red lump that looks as though it couldn't hold blood enough to keep a mosquito from fainting, persists in yelling like thunder. It shows a great desire to swallow its bits, and the other day they popped down its throat, and what prevented their going through was the croak in its voice. It stopped its noise and I was happy for one and a half minutes.
It's a pleasant thing to have a baby in the house—pleasant to your belly-ache kind. Think of the pleasure of a father, in the middle of the night, with his arms fast upon a square yard of cold oil cloth, dropping parovoz in a teaspoon, by moonlight, the nurse slipping on the door, the wife of your bosom shouting "bury," and the baby yelling till the fresco drops from the ceiling. It's a nice time to think of dress-cats, pants, ties and white kids, Shrapnels of departed cocktails, what a picture for an article in Plaster Paris! Its mother says the darling is troubled with the wind on the stomach; it beats all the wind instruments you ever heard of. I have to get up in the cold and shiver while the milk warms; it is the bottle. I have a cradle with the representation of a nutcracker, with bottles on the dashboard. I tried to stop to breathe the other night; it was no go; I rocked it so hard I missed stays, and sent it slap clear across the room, inserting a jar of preserves. It didn't make any noise then. Oh, no! Its mother says, only yell till it gets bleached (it's been vaccinated,) and old enough to crawl about and feed on pins. Yes, I am going to wait. Won't it be delightful? John, run for the doctor, it's fell in the sky well and is chafing with a potatoe skin; sis has fallen down stairs; sis has swallowed the tack hammer; shows signs of the mumps, erump, whooping cough, small-pox, cholera, dysentery, cholera infantum, or one of the other things; take the doctor take the money laid by for my winter's coal bed; and all this comes of my shampooing and curling my hair, wearing nice clothes and looking handsome, going a courting and making my wife fall in love with me and marry me!

SANDWICH FOR SPALLS.—A correspondent of the London Field says: I litter the horses on it to a depth of nine inches, raking off the damp and soiled surface every morning, and spreading evenly a little fresh, removing the whole four or five times a year. Its advantages appear to be many, of which I will state a few which give it, in my estimation, its greatest superiority over straw. It is much cleaner, and more easily arranged; and, of course, much cheaper at first cost, making, in the end, excellent manure. It is especially a good medicine to the feet, affording the a cool porous surface, a substitute for the soil of earth we always find in horses' hoofs, grass, and presents the nearest resemblance to a horse's natural footing on the earth. We never had a diseased foot since the introduction of sawdust in the stable, now some years since. Horses bedded on sawdust are freer from dust and stains than when in ordinary litter, simply because sawdust is a better absorbent, perhaps, and less likely to be soiled by their frequent lying down for hours in the day. It also has the recommendation of being unobtainable—an advantage which all in charge of horses with the habit of eating their litter will admit.

Manner of Death of English Sovereigns.
William the Conqueror died from enormous fat, from drink and from the violence of his passions.
William Rufus died of the death of the poor stag which he hunted.
Henry II. died of a broken heart, occasioned by the bad conduct of his children.
Richard Coeur de Lion, like the animal from which his heart was named, died by an arrow from an archer.
John died nobody knows how, but it is said from chagrin, which we suppose is another term for a dose of hellfire.
Henry III. is said to have "died a natural death."
Edward I. is likewise said to have died a "natural sickness"—a sickness which it would puzzle all the College of Physicians to denominate.
Edward II. was most barbarously and indecently murdered by ruffians employed by his own mother and her paramour.
Edward III. died of dotage and Richard II. of starvation—the very reverse of George IV.
Henry IV. is said to have died of "fits caused by uncleanliness;" and uncleanliness in those times was a very common complaint.
Henry V. is said to have died of "a painful affliction, prematurely." This is a courtly term for getting rid of a king.
Henry VI. died in prison, by means known then only to his jailer, and known now only to Heaven.
Edward V. was strangled in the Tower by his uncle, Richard III.
Richard III. was killed in battle.
Henry VIII. wasted away, as a miser ought to.
Henry VIII. died of carbuncles, fat and fury.
Edward VI. died of a decline.
Queen Mary is said to have died of a broken heart.
Old Queen Bess is said to have died of melancholy from having sacrificed Essex to his enemies.
James I. died of drinking and the effects of vice.
Charles I. died on the scaffold.
Charles II. died suddenly—it is said of apoplexy.
William III. died from consumptive habits of body and from the stumblings of his horse.
Queen Anne died from dropsy, which his physicians politely called an apoplexy.
George II. died of a rupture of the heart, the periodicals of that day termed a visitation of God.
George III. died as he had lived—a madman. Throughout life he was at least a consistent monarch.
George IV. died of gluttony and drunkenness.
William IV. died amidst the sympathies of his subjects.

A LEAN, LANK, LOST HUSBAND.—Under the heading "Strayed or Stolen," Mrs. Susan Humbley, of Shelby's Farm, Wythe county, advertises her husband, Andrew Jackson Humbley, in a Virginia paper. She says he left her about two months ago, in company with one Manda Wylie, who she believes "confused or bewildered" him by giving him a cup of coffee to drink, upon the top of which he saw a black goss swimming." They were accompanied by her son "Bos, who left a wife and three children." The deserted matron says: "I want A. J. arrested and handcuffed and brought back to me dead or alive, as he owes a good many debts that he must pay, and he owes me a support in my old age. He is supposed to have gone to Tennessee or Iowa, or out West. He is a long, lean, lank fellow, about six feet high, broad shoulders, thin beard, light hair, and complexion blue eyes, and about forty-five years of age, being about twenty years younger than myself." She offers to pay anybody a fair price who will return him to her "dead or alive," and requests all the papers in the United States to copy the advertisement some time and forward their bills to her.
